Chamberlain Pledges War If Hitler Takes Danzig

Commons Address Accepts Claim City Is Vital to Polish Independence

By the Associated Press.

London, July 10.—Prime Minister Chamberlain told Fuehrer Hitler today, through a carefully-worded statement to the House of Commons, that Britain would fight alongside Poland if necessary to prevent Germany from taking the free Baltic port of Danzig back into the Reich.

Hitler was not mentioned by name, but there was no mistaking that the statement, approved in advance by both Poland and France, was written for him.

Reiterating Britain's promise to support the Poles if they fought to protect their independence, Chamberlain said:

"The Vistula (river) is Poland's only waterway to the Baltic, and the port at its mouth (Danzig) is therefore of vital strategic and economic importance to her."

Guarantee Stressed

This statement was generally interpreted as Britain's acceptance of the Polish claim that Danzig is vital to Polish independence, which Britain has guaranteed.

Answering critics who insisted that "Britain will never fight for Danzig," and obviously trying to discourage Germany from believing she can take Danzig into the Reich without a major war, Chamberlain stressed these four points:

"We have guaranteed to give our assistance to Poland in the case of a clear threat to her independence which she considers is vital to resist with her national forces, and we are firmly resolved to carry out this undertaking."

Alert for Uprising

Britain accepts the fact that Danzig is vital to Polish independence because "another power established in Danzig could, if it desired, block Poland's access to the sea and so exert an economic and military stranglehold upon her."

Britain is alert for action by Germany to encourage an uprising in Danzig which would force Poland to take action against the Free City and thus make Poland seem an aggressor.

"If the sequence of events should in fact be such as is contemplated in this hypothesis, the honorable members will realize . . . that the issue could not be considered as a purely local matter involving the rights and liberties of the Danzigers, which, incidentally, are in no way threatened, but would at once raise graver issues affecting Polish national existence and independence."

All Parties Agreed

Members rushed from the House of Commons to the lobby as soon as Chamberlain finished, and there, apparently, all parties agreed that it was a clear, unequivocal statement which could be interpreted only as a warning to the German Fuehrer.

It was, members said, an attempt to erase any basis for a repetition of the German charge that Britain did not state clearly when and whom she would fight in 1914.

But if this was a major statement of British foreign policy on an issue which many experts believe may lead to a second world war, it was certainly delivered to the House in a most casual way.

For half an hour before he spoke, Chamberlain was slouched on the Government front bench with his

British, French, Dutch, Swiss Told To Leave Tyrol

Special Cable to The Post.

Rome, July 10.—Some hundreds of British, French, Dutch and Swiss residents of the Alto Adige Province of the South Tyrol, have received 48 hours notice from the Italian authorities to leave for other parts, it was learned today.

This measure, apparently, does not apply to Americans. Presumably it has some connection with the repatriation or scattering of nearly 10,000 Germans and 200,000 German-speaking Italians who live south of the Brenner Pass, which has been under negotiation between Rome and Berlin.

The Netherlands and Swiss ministers were reported to have taken the question up with the Italian government. The number of Swiss involved was thought to be considerable. Italian officials said the order concerned "military information."

Boys Barred From Grassy Park Must Play Ball in Nearby Alley

'The Cops Run Us Off,' Say Youngsters Who Don't Prefer Blistering Pavement To Cool Sod; Sign Prohibits Baseball

A bunch of the kids was whooping it up in an alley off Concord avenue northwest. The glare of a midday sun, reflected from the blistering pavement, didn't exactly add zest to the ball game in progress.

They were playing in the alley and not on a grassy plot of ample dimensions across the street, because United States Park Police recently erected some brand new signs reading: "Ball Playing of Any Kind Prohibited."

The youngsters admitted it would be "swell" to use the sodded plot with its ample sprinkling of shade trees, but every time they invade the place and start to toss a ball, they reported, "the cops run us off."

The neighborhood, just east of Brightwood, has one of the largest juvenile populations in the city. For children who live near Fifth street and Concord avenue—where the park in question is situated—there are two playgrounds, one too small for ball games and the other nearly a mile away.

There was a time not so long ago when younger children of the community could enjoy a ball game

Senators Slated To Call Up Neutrality Bill

Isolationists Lack Votes Needed to Delay Action Further

By Robert C. Albright

Plans to seek indefinite postponement of neutrality bill action were held in abeyance last night by isolationist foes of the Administration measure as unofficial polls showed them still shy of the votes needed for further delay.

Unless the situation changes overnight, no motion to postpone decisive action will be offered when the Foreign Relations Committee meets this morning for a showdown on the neutrality issue.

If plans are changed, and such a motion is offered, Administration leaders confidently forecast its defeat by a slim margin.

Committee Slated to Proceed

Consensus at the Capitol was that the committee will proceed this morning to call up either the House-approved Bloom bill or one of the pending committee measures, and continue daily sessions until a bill is reported to the Senate.

Meantime, it was learned that Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, a leading opponent of the Administration's proposals to repeal the arms embargo, unlike many of his colleagues, prefers to carry the bill to the Senate floor for debate. Borah is understood nonetheless to have reserved the right to vote for postponement if his associates decide on such strategy.

Five members of the isolationist bloc strategy committee, including Borah, conferred yesterday morning without reaching any agreement on

Police Impound Jalopy, Return to Find It 'Stolen'

The man who got tired of his 1927 model car and abandoned it at Twelfth and U streets northwest Sunday night may have changed his mind about the venerable jalopy but that, according to police, is only a woman's prerogative.

Discovered by Thirteenth Precinct police, the auto was impounded behind the station house.

During the night the old auto mysteriously disappeared. Police listed it as "stolen."

D.C. Pedestrian Law Praised Nationally

Capital Cited as One of Few Cities Which Have Successful Regulation

Results of Washington's pedestrian control laws were hailed as "astonishing" yesterday by the National Safety Council.

In an Associated Press dispatch from Chicago Washington was praised as one of a half-dozen cities throughout the country which successfully have adopted regulations to control and protect pedestrian traffic.

Last year, the council reported, 12,500 pedestrians were killed and 275,000 were injured in nationwide highway mishaps. Extraordinary and vigorous campaigns in all parts of the country, the council said, may be considered the beginning of a new national movement to protect pedestrians.

Rufus C. Jasper, traffic engineer and secretary of the council's pedestrian committee, said Washington accepted a fortuitous challenge in this fashion:

"A friend of one of Washington's traffic officials, in Los Angeles a few months ago, started across a street after looking in all directions to see that no cars were approaching. A policeman blew his whistle, called the man back to the sidewalk and said, 'Where are you from—Washington, D. C.?'

"When the traffic officials in Washington heard about it, they decided it was the last straw. They felt something had to be done about pedestrian accidents, which made

Coroner Scouts Foul Play in Walters Death

No Evidence of Suicide, He Says; Inquest To Be This Morning

Reno, Nev., July 10 (AP).—Coroner Harry Dunseath tentatively set 11 a. m. tomorrow for an inquest into death of Mrs. Caroline Roebling Hagner Walters, 27-year-old heiress, and said that as a result of his own investigation he believed the shooting accidental.

"I have completed my investigation," he asserted, "and have found no evidence of foul play nor evidence of suicide."

The bride of a few weeks was found fatally wounded in her bedroom Saturday, a pistol lying near her.

"I know of no motive for the suicide," Dunseath declared, "and cannot see why anyone contemplating suicide would shoot himself in the spot the bullet struck Mrs. Walters."

He explained the bullet pierced her left shoulder and severed an artery.

Mrs. Walters' mother, Mrs. Arthur O'Brien, arrived with her husband tonight.

Rain Breaks Heat Wave Here After 3 Are Prostrated

Three persons were prostrated by the 90-degree heat yesterday before a rain dropped the temperature 19 degrees in 45 minutes, between 2:45 and 3:30 p. m.

Immediately after the short shower, the mercury began to rise again, but the forecaster said the storm had broken up the heat wave and predicted moderate dry and clear weather for a couple of days. Although accompanied by a 28-mile-an-hour northwest wind, the shower did little damage.

Treated at District hospitals for heat prostrations were Preston Morris, 50, of Logans Court; Walter Wallace, 60, of Deanwood Park, Md.; William Johnson, 46, of 943 Florida avenue northwest.

Legless Man Asks Exemption From Monkey Tax

Eddie Bernstein, legless pencil seller, yesterday appealed to the District Commissioners for exemption from a $1 a day tax on Gypsy, his pet monkey.

Gypsy draws customers, Eddie said, but "it would bankrupt me to pay $365 a year to keep him." He has kept the monkey in a pet shop for the last month because he can't afford the tax, he told the Commissioners.

An ordinance approved last February provides that no captured animal can be displayed in the District without a permit issued for a 10-day period for $10. The Commissioners will consider Eddie's petition today.

Eddie lives at 937 H street northwest and does most of his business in the 1200 block of F street northwest.

100 Reported Slain in New Loyalist Uprisings in Spain

By the United Press.

Gibraltar (Tuesday), July 11.—Reports of republican uprisings in Madrid, Barcelona and other Spanish cities were widely circulated here today and British sources linked them with yesterday's devastating munitions explosion at Penaranda de Bracamonte in which more than 100 persons were killed.

The British believed the uprisings were carried out, in part at least, by members of the republican death brigade which, they said, is pledged to continue resistance to Gen. Franco as long as any of its members are alive.

An informant who is close to members of the Spanish consulate here told the United Press today that the Spanish republican flag was hoisted Monday in a suburb of Barcelona.

Hoisting of the flag was believed part of a republican uprising possibly a demonstration against Gen. Franco for his merciless campaign in eliminating all "traitors" inside nationalist Spain.

The informant said there was shooting in Barcelona and several persons were arrested.

D. C. Bills Filibustered In House

'Swat-District' Day Sees Action Only on Auto License Date; Members Scolded

By James D. Secrest.

"Swat-the-District" day was observed in the House yesterday in a fashion that recalled the sessions of a few years ago as members conducted a two-hour filibuster to block consideration of two local bills.

One of the bills would have authorized the Public Utilities Commission to limit the number of taxicabs; members feared this would raise rates and force them to pay more than 20 cents to ride from the Capitol downtown.

The other would have amended the law regulating the practice of optometry in Washington. This legislation was opposed in a deluge of letters from optometry associations in the States.

Auto Licenses Extended

Because of the filibuster the only bill passed by the House, with six measures on the calendar, was a change in the motor vehicle registration law to move the date from March 1 to April 1 to conform with Maryland and Virginia laws.

The House amended the bill, which had been passed by the Senate, to include public motor vehicles under its provisions.

After sitting through three quorum calls only to have his motions to go into the committee of the whole defeated, District Committee Chairman Randolph took the floor and berated the members in a mild way for their ill treatment of the committee.

Two Others Lecture House

His talk was followed with lectures by Representatives Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, and Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, members of the District Committee.

"I believe this House failed to play fair with the House District Committee," Randolph said.

Asserting that "none of you would envy a member who serves on the House District Committee," Randolph said that in the future he hoped the House would show "a more kindly attitude" toward the committee and the District.

Nichols, who had sponsored the optometry bill which started the filibuster, reprimanded the House membership for shirking responsibility to the District.

Responsibility Shirked

"By a vote this afternoon you refused to do what you promised in taking the oath of office," he said.

"You're mad at the newspapers," he added, "and I can't say that I blame you. Nevertheless, you're responsible for a voteless city of 600,000 persons. The only way they can get a law is for you to act."

Dirksen, in a fatherly fashion, called attention to what he termed the "enigmatic situation" of voters back home directing the course of purely local District legislation.

"Why should we impale the District merely because somebody back home doesn't like a bill designed for the District alone?" he asked.

Earlier in the day the House District Committee conducted a smaller filibuster of its own in order to prevent a vote on the amended Schulte milk bill.

McNutt FSA Nomination Due Today

President Expected To Speed Name to Senate; Political Speculation Grows

By Felix Cotten.

Paul V. McNutt, United States High Commissioner to the Philippines and most aggressive Presidential candidate in either party, has accepted a $12,000-a-year appointment as Federal Security Administrator, it was learned yesterday.

He will continue, meanwhile, his campaign for the 1940 Democratic Presidential nomination.

President Roosevelt is expected to send the nomination to the Senate today. He may also discuss the appointment at his press conference late today.

From Columbus, Ohio, there came last night word that McNutt had been offered the presidency of the Ohio State University but had rejected it, the Associated Press said, because he was to accept the Federal security post.

Has Political Implications

Selection of McNutt for the security post, political forecasters agreed, has broad political implications. Interpretations placed on the move follow:

In trimming sails for 1940, the Administration has decided to take a chance with the tall, white-haired former Indiana Governor. Therefore, he is being given a try-out. New Dealers will watch how he performs, and if they like him he may become the Administration candidate.

So far as McNutt is concerned, it is his big opportunity. Unless the President seeks a third term, it virtually puts him in the No. 1 place, provided, of course, he delivers the goods. He could not get the nomination anyway without the President's active support.

The job of Federal Security Administrator, in which he will have supervision over such agencies as the Social Security Board, the Civilian Conservation Corps, and the National Youth Administration is made to order for McNutt from a political standpoint. What the New Deal lacks most is an understudy to the President—a man who can bring the New Deal before the people and who has "crowd appeal." There is no doubt about McNutt's abilities on this score. If he also lives up to his reputation as an administrator, his chances are quite good.

In New Deal Camp

McNutt definitely has been taken into the New Deal camp. This apparently means the end of efforts to represent him as a "middle-of-the-roader" or compromise candidate.

A Cabinet shakeup, meanwhile, is regarded as possible in filling vacancies in key Administrative posts. The death of Secretary of the Navy Swanson leaves his place to be filled.

Expectation is that Charles Edison, Assistant Secretary of the Navy and son of the famous inventor, will be moved up to the secretaryship. But there is an outside possibility that the President will appoint someone else.

The fact that Jesse H. Jones, new Federal loan administrator, cruised on the river with the President over the week-end, caused speculation as to whether the President had offered Jones the Navy post. The New Deal "inner circle" would like to put someone more in sympathy with their lending ideas in the loan administrator job.

One of the President's main worries is said to be the War Department situation. The national defense program is largely under the direction of Assistant Secretary Louis Johnson. There has been considerable talk of an ambassadorship for Secretary of War Woodring.

In case Woodring should accept an ambassadorship, there is a strong

Policeman Dies After Beating By WPA Pickets

Nonstrikers Herded To Parking Lot and Stoned; Mob of 1,000 Hurts Several Men

By the Associated Press

Minneapolis, July 10.—A policeman who helped rescue a nonstriking WPA worker from a crowd of demonstrators died late today after he was beaten by angry strikers.

Patrolman John B. Gearty, 40, was the victim. Dr. G. W. Gallerstrom, who conducted a post-mortem tonight, said Gearty died from coronary sclerosis. He was unable to stand the excitement and beating because of a poor heart condition, the physician said.

Patrolman Paul Larson, his companion, said Gearty was pummeled over the head and shoulders by at least a half-dozen men as they tried to put Frank Fischer, 45, the WPA worker, on a streetcar for home.

Mob Breaks Police Line

Thirty traffic police were escorting 100 or more women and men from a sewing project at Second avenue north and Second street when the fighting broke out.

A crowd, estimated by a policeman in the detail at 1,000, hissed and booed the workers. The demonstrators had quit their WPA jobs in protest over the 130-hour work month ordered by Congress and were irritated that the sewing workers wished to continue with their relief project.

Catcalls became louder as the workers passed between the policemen. A few men in the crowd started toward the nonstrikers. With a surge, the strikers broke police lines. They surrounded the workers and herded them to a parking lot.

There they pelted their victims with sand, pebbles, sticks and broken glass. Police charged the crowd and rounded up those they were to escort. Fischer had been knocked down or fallen to the ground.

Battle at Street Car

Angry demonstrators gathered around him. The police tried to put him aboard a street car in front of the Great Northern Railway depot so he could go home. Strikers formed a human chain in front of the car and halted its progress. They tried to board the car, and the motorman was forced to close the gates, barring the police and Fischer from entry.

Someone broke a street car window. More men milled around the patrolmen and Fischer. Fists flew and the officers used nightsticks to force their way to a squad car.

In the car, they drove toward the City Hall to house Fischer in jail for safekeeping. An estimated 200 demonstrators followed, booing and hurling insults. On the City Hall steps there was more scuffling before police cleared a way and darted inside.

Picketers Raid School

Fischer and Patrolman Gearty later reported to the hospital for treatment. An hour after the fighting, Gearty was dead. He, Fischer and Florence Lindsay, 45, who fainted, were the only hospital victims of two skirmishes here.

Earlier a band of 75 to 100 roving pickets stopped at a schoolhouse here where 180 persons were working on a historical research project. "Close up, close up!" they shouted. Some invaded the corridors.

Robert Elftman, heading nonstrikers, said his shirt was torn from his back and he was clawed by three men who tried to hurl him downstairs. He said he slugged one picket before police dispersed the demonstrators. Miss Lindsay fainted in the excitement.

Gearty's was the first death from street fighting since the truck strikes of 1934 when two special deputies were slain.

Congress Faces Battle Over WPA Wages

9 New Deal Senators Join Revision Move; House Assent Unlikely

With thousands of strikers facing dismissal from relief rolls, Congress yesterday was threatened with a battle over restoration of prevailing wage rates to WPA workers.

Senator Murray (Democrat), of Montana, announced he had obtained support of eight other Democratic Senators for a bill he will introduce today to amend the 11-day old relief act to ensure continuance of the prevailing wage guarantee and maintenance of monthly WPA earnings at least at their former level.

Office Workers to Quit

Such a bill was offered to the House by Representative Bradley (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, while other measures to restore the prevailing wages were presented by Chairman Sabath of the Rules Committee and Representative Keller (Democrat), of Illinois.

Members of the C. I. O.'s United Office and Professional Workers of America, meanwhile, were author-

Protest against exclusion of suffrage provisions in the Kennedy reorganization bill for the District was voiced yesterday at the quarterly meeting of the executive board of the Maryland and District of Columbia Industrial Union Council. Swanson Buried in Virginia As Nation Pays Last Tribute

Claude A. Swanson, a man the Virginians never defeated for public office, was returned in death to Richmond late yesterday and buried on one of the highest hills of historic Hollywood Cemetery.

His burial, in the capital of his native State, followed an earlier service in the Senate Chamber in Washington, where the body of the late Secretary of the Navy lay in state before an assemblage of national figures, headed by the President.

The ceremonies in Richmond were brief, as was the final tribute in Washington. The body was taken directly from the train to Hollywood Cemetery, that overlooks the valley of the James River. There Capt. Robert D. Workman, head chaplain of the Navy, delivered a short prayer from the entrance to the vault, where Mrs. Swanson, other members of the immediate family and a delegation of the Secretary's warm friends were assembled.

The casket, draped in its journey from Washington to Richmond with a bright American flag, was lowered into the ground beside the first Mrs. Swanson, once Miss Elizabeth Lyons.

Earlier, the Senate and House, jointly, paid last tribute to Mr. Swanson and joined official Washington in a procession behind the flag-draped casket, atop a caisson in mourning, to Union Station, where the body was placed aboard

FILIBUSTER: A MINORITY TANTRUM?

For months the cloud of a threatening filibuster on neutrality has hung over this Congress

Almost everyone on the Hill except the threatening filibusterers has been faintly annoyed. After all, a filibuster is a minority tantrum.

Sen. Nye
. . . righteous

A child who lies on the floor screaming and kicking its heels is a small minority conducting a filibuster.

Filibusters happen only in the Senate. Debating time in the House is cut too thin, like radio time, to permit filibustering. House speeches are like machine-sliced baloney.

But a Senator can talk as long as his larynx permits, or until his mind goes numb, or until his eyes can't focus on the printed page he's reading aloud, or until his feet hurt from standing up so long.

* * * *

Often it's the less talented Senators who filibuster, the less erudite ones with single-track minds, like Bilbo, or the exhibitionists like Bob Reynolds, or the what-is-its like Huey Long, or the self-righteous with a monopoly on the truth like Gerald Nye.

Occasionally a gifted statesman like Borah, close to the ear of God, might join in.

"—it proves he can read"

Filibuster oratory is low grade.

Reynolds rambles on in a bumptious way which might cause him to be kicked out of a saloon.

Bilbo reads extracts from books dug up by his secretaries, which prove only that he can read long words with only a moderate number of mistakes.

Some read aloud from newspapers, which is offensive because other Senators are reading the papers anyhow as they try not to listen.

* * * *

The purpose of a filibuster is to talk the majority into impotence, futility and surrender. By a two-thirds vote the majority can invoke limited debate (cloture) but a Senator hates to do that to a colleague; he might retaliate and some day shut him up with cloture.

* * * *

Psychologically, a filibuster works this way:

First, the time it wastes brings nearer the date when other Senators want to adjourn the session, to go home and avoid the heat, or the deadline for passage of other bills, or creates a jam of important legislation.

Second, the vehemence of the filibusterers, their very stubbornness, tends to convince the majority unwillingly that maybe there's something in what the minority is saying.

* * * *

Third, a strong filibuster leaves even an overwhelming majority wondering whether the minority feeling is not quite strong throughout the country—especially if the country takes the filibuster calmly and good-naturedly, or indifferently, as it often does. Fourth, it exhausts the majority physically almost as much as it exhausts the minority, like a boy beating on a tin pan.

"—nibble as they filibuster"

To hold the floor and keep a bill from going to a vote and passage a Senator must stay on his feet and keep talking. He must miss meals and can't even go to the bathroom to wash his face, unless he has well-drilled fellow filibusterers.

Sometimes they violate the Senate decorum by nibbling a sandwich or sipping some milk as they orate.

Even a lithe but aging Senator like Reynolds often leans on a desk as he talks, to rest his dogs.

* * * *

Once the blind Senator Gore, in the midst of a filibuster, sat down, expecting another filibusterer to carry on. But his colleague had momentarily left the floor to go to the bathroom, so the filibuster flopped and the bill went to a vote. On other occasions filibusterers have been tripped up by parliamentary rules which they didn't understand clearly, which caused them to lose the floor.

* * * *

But a filibuster is not merely a minority tantrum. It is the seamy side of that noble Senate tradition, the right to unlimited debate and deliberation. It is a Senate legend that the country has seldom mourned the loss of acts defeated by filibusterers.

Sometimes the filibusterer, in his blind, ill-mannered, stubborn, illogical defiance of the will of the majority, seems to be serving the cause of democracy.

But some day the filibusterer may slay democracy.

Lindbergh Asks 10-Million Air Research Plant

House Sub-committee Urged to Approve Sunnyvale Project

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh yesterday asked immediate establishment of a $10,000,000 aeronautical research center at Sunnyvale, Calif., to enable the United States to build military planes comparable to those of Germany.

The airman appeared before a House Appropriations sub-committee behind closed doors to urge approval of the project, recommended earlier by President Roosevelt and then turned down by the group. It would provide a new basic air research laboratory to supplement the existing National Advisory Committee plant at Langley Field, Va.

At the same time, President Roosevelt asked Congress to suspend Government procurement laws requiring competitive bidding during the next two years to permit the aircraft program to be spread over the entire air industry. He proposed that plane contracts be let on a cost-plus-fee basis to gear more companies to production of latest type aircraft.

Spreading Now Impossible

Army experts declare that the air force-in-being at the beginning of a war would be wiped out within two to three months, in stressing the importance of an industry capable of replacing planes in short order. Germany is reported to have geared its aircraft plants to a capacity of 20,000 fighting planes a year, and United States defense officials hope to expand American production to something approaching this figure under the new Army program.

To do so, the plane program must be spread over the entire industry, officials hold, an arrangement found to be impossible under the present law. The President therefore wrote Chairman May of the House Military Committee yesterday asking that he sponsor legislation to permit suspension of the present competitive bidding statute until June 30, 1941. May said the President had told him that three aircraft companies now are dividing the huge Army air program.

A hearing will be held on the Administration proposal this morning, May said. It applies to both the Army and Navy.

Air Executives Confer

Meanwhile, 30 executives of the industry conferred with Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson and Army procurmeent officials on problems which may arise to delay production.

Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of Air Corps, addressed the group on technical phases of the program and joined in the consideration of plans for mobilization in time of war, a project which shared the attention of the conference.

Lindbergh gave the House subcommittee an "off-the-record" account of the latest developments in foreign and domestic military plane production. Before returning to the United States this spring he inspected the aircraft factories of Germany and other European nations and in the last two or three months has been making a survey of research facilities here for the War Department.

Secretary of War Woodring also asked Congress to amend the national defense act to permit the enlistment of older men in the enlisted reserve. He said older, skilled mechanics are needed for technical posts and proposed that Congress authorize the Army to take men up to and including 45 years of age.

TVA May Borrow To Buy Properties, Forego Expansion

By the Associated Press.

Enactment of compromise legislation to authorize the Tennessee Valley Authority to issue bonds to finance private utility purchases in the mid-South was predicted yesterday after TVA's foes offered a proposal that supporters of the Federal agency said was acceptable.

The proposal was offered by Chairman May (Democrat), of Kentucky, House conferees and under its terms TVA would be authorized to issue $61,500,000 in new bonds (in addition to bonds previously issued), $46,000,000 of which could be used to finance TVA's share of a $78,600,000 transaction for Tennessee Electric Power Co. properties; $2,000,000 for loans to municipalities and cooperatives involved in the TEPCO deal; $7,000,000 for rehabilitation of the acquired properties and interconnection with TVA lines and $6,500,000 for purchase of Commonwealth & Southern properties in north Alabama and north Mississippi.

The House would recede from its amendment specifically limiting the TVA's power sales to the Tennessee watershed, but the TVA would be required to seek Congressional consent for any further expansions outside the watershed.

U. S. Offers to Drop Union Racket Case

New York, July 10 (AP).—The Federal Government offered today to drop racketeering charges against the officials of a teamsters' union if certain individuals would plead guilty by next Monday and enter into a consent decree ending the collection of fees from trucks operating in interstate commerce.

Assistant United States Attorney General Moses M. Lewis told Federal Judge William Bondy the Government felt "more could be accomplished by a decree, with injunction restrictions, than by trying the defendants, most of whom are ordinary members of the union."

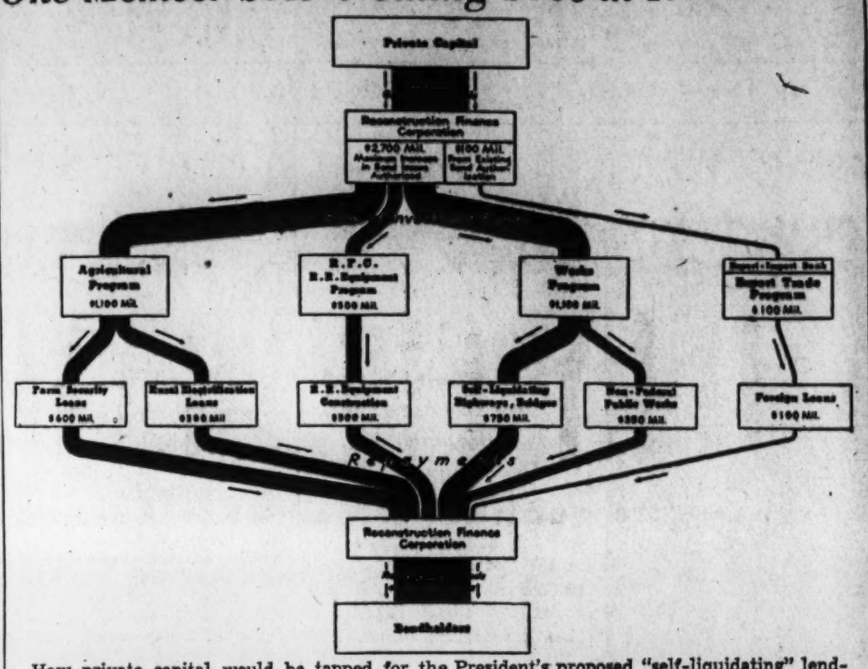
Congress Gets President's Huge Lending Bill; One Member Sees 'Nothing Free in It'



How private capital would be tapped for the President's proposed "self-liquidating" lending program through sale of governmental-guaranteed bonds by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is shown above. Funds to finance public works, toll roads and bridges and highway equipment, railroad rolling stock and shop equipment, rural electrification projects, farm tenancy loans and loans to finance foreign trade would flow, as shown, from the RFC lending reservoir, through the Agriculture Department, the Public Roads Administration, the Public Works Administration, the Rural Electrification Administration and the Export-Import Bank. Theory is that obligations incurred would be liquidated by the income from the program itself. They would be segregated from other public debt obligations

Senate Hearings Scheduled for Tomorrow; Administration Leaders Hopeful of Pushing Program Through in Two or Three Weeks

President Roosevelt's new $2,800,000,000 self-liquidating loan program was presented yesterday to a Congress apathetic toward the measure "because," as one member said, "there's nothing free in it."

With Senate hearings scheduled to begin tomorrow, Administration leaders were hopeful of whipping the bill through both houses within two or three weeks; but opposition arising in widely divergent quarters presaged a stiff Congressional battle.

Introduced by Majority Leader Barkley in the Senate and Chairman Steagall of the Banking and Currency Committee in the House, the bill authorizes the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to increase its bond issues by $2,700,000,000 and raises credit facilities of the Export-Import Bank by $100,000,000. An additional $800,000,000 loan authorization for the United States Housing Authority, now pending in a separate measure, would bring the total amount of the business-revival program to $3,600,000,000.

A proposal for a $500,000,000 authorization for loans to stimulate foreign trade, part of President Roosevelt's original program, was omitted from the bill because of intense Congressional protests.

Of the sums made available by the measure, the President has estimated $670,000,000 would be spent during the current fiscal year, and, in addition, the $100,000,000 for foreign trade would be obligated if not actually expended.

The bill provides $350,000,000 for non-Federal public works, to be handled by the commissioner of the newly created Federal Works Agency; $750,000,000 for toll roads and bridges, handled by the commissioner of Public Roads; $500,000,000 for railroad equipment loans, through the Reconstruction Finance Corpration; $500,000,000 for the Rural Electrification Administration, including $40,000,000 already appropriated, to be handled by that agency; and $600,000,000 for farm tenancy loans, including $100,000,000 already appropriated, through the Department of Agriculture.

Pointing out that the measure creates no new agencies and disturbs no existing authority, Steagall emphasized the Administration's view that "all disbursements would be for projects which are self-liquidating in character."

Hardly had the details of the bill been made public when attacks were launched by both Democrats and Republicans on specific features. Chairman Wheeler, of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, asserted he was so strongly opposed to Federal railroad equipment loans that he might appear before the Senate Banking Committee to express his views.

Back to War Days

"I think such a program would carry us back to the position in which we found the railroads after they were turned back from wartime Government ownership," he said. "I am no advocate of direct loans to the railroads, but I would much prefer direct loans to this proposed leasing of equipment."

The projected construction of toll roads and bridges also seemed headed for difficulties. Chairman Cartwright, of the House Roads Committee, said that "as an offhand opinion, I believe I'd oppose that section of the bill." Cartwright pointed out that the Bureau of Public Roads has taken "a very definite stand" against toll roads, and he added, "I'll be guided by the bureau."

Bitter Republican opposition against "the writing of a blank check for the President" was forecast by Representative Wolcott, of Michigan, ranking minority member of the Banking and Currency Committee. "The powers granted the President under this bill would make those heretofore granted seem somewhat inconsequential," commented Wolcott, chairman of the Republican financial policy committee.

FTC Cites 2 D.C. Firms in Gasoline Sales

Price Discrimination Charged in Favor of Five Cab Companies

The American Oil Co., of Baltimore, and General Finance, Inc., of Washington, are named in a Federal Trade Commission complaint alleging price discrimination in the sale of gasoline in violation of the Robinson-Patman Act, the commission announced yesterday.

Five taxicab companies whose policies, according to a commission statement, are "controlled by General Finance, Inc., or by its officers, Herbert Glassman and Edward C. Ostrow," contracted with the oil company, the complaint alleges, to buy gas 5½ cents a gallon under "posted" retail service station price and from 1½ to 2½ cents below the "posted" tank wagon price charged by the company to other retail distributors here.

More than 100,000 gallons of American Oil Co. gas has been retailed by General Finance, Inc., to taxicab operators and the public in the last three years although the contract stipulated that the gasoline was to have been consumed by the buyer, the commission declared.

Glassman explained yesterday that his company operates a station at Fourteenth street and Florida avenue northwest, at which gas is sold to cab drivers at a 3-cent discount and to the general public at 2 cents under the retail market.

The commission listed the companies named in the contract as the City Cab Corporation, Inc., General Taxicab, Inc., Prudom Cab Co., Inc., and the Harlem Taxicab Association, Inc. Only the City and the Harlem operators have any present connection with his company in the sale and financing of taxicabs, Glassman said.

Civil Service League Backs Hatch Bill

Letter to House Members Seeks to Dispel 'False Fears'

House members were urged by the National Civil Service Reform League yesterday to support the Hatch bill as originally passed by the Senate to "prevent pernicious political activities in the Federal civil service."

Objecting to the "emasculated" version of the bill reported to the House, Robert L. Johnson, league president, in a letter to members of the House, sought to counteract "false fears." He wrote:

"Actually, all that the Hatch bill does is to extend to the entire civil service the prohibitions against political activity, political coercion and solicitation of campaign funds which, under the civil service law, have long applied to persons in the classified service."

Johnson wrote that the league would have no objection to exemption from provisions of the law of "those Federal officials who actually determine political policy," but expressed the view that "not more than 1,000 positions can be placed in this category."

"The wisdom of the political activity sections of the civil service law," he continued, "applying to persons in the classified service, have never been seriously challenged. We can see no valid reason why they should not be extended to the vast majority of positions in the unclassified service. . . .

"Had this vast number of positions been placed originally in the classified service, where they properly belong, the prohibitions in the civil service rules would apply now. Now that the proportion of unclassified positions has arisen to about one-third of the service, we cannot afford to let such political activity go unchecked."

Rep. Andresen Charges Wage-Hour Division Is Trying to Kill Small Newspapers

Representative Andresen (Republican), of Minnesota, told the House yesterday the Administration was attempting to destroy the small newspapers of the country through rulings of the wage-hour division of the Labor Department.

ANDRESEN

"The New Deal is trying to get control of the small weeklies and, failing that, to destroy them," Andresen said. "The wage-hour department is vitiating the intent of Congress when it passed that law."

Andresen referred to a ruling by the board which he said held that the exemption from the wage-hour law applicable to newspapers of less than 3,000 circulation would not apply where a plant otherwise exempt did job printing which went into interstate commerce.

A bill proposing a reduction in interest rates on Federally held or Federally insured home mortgages will be introduced by Senator Barbour (Republican), of New Jersey, he said yesterday.

"A general reduction in interest rates on all loans would, in my opinion, do more to stimulate business recovery in the United States than any other single factor," the Senator asserted.

The Agriculture Department's "strong desire" that Federal crop insurance be extended to cotton was expressed yesterday to the House Agriculture Committee.

Cecil A. Johnson, assistant manager of the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation, outlined the department's view and read a letter from Secretary Wallace to Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama.

Wallace wrote that insurance against losses from drought and other natural hazards might well be extended to cotton "in view of the many hazards that affect the production of cotton and the large number of farmers who must face these hazards."

Representative Cummings (Democrat), of Colorado, observed that the existing crop-insurance system for wheat had gone into "the red" nearly $5,000,000 in the fiscal year just ended.

The witness agreed this was true if administrative costs were considered "in the red," but he said Congress had provided that the Federal Government should pay administrative expense and that the program had been carried out exactly as the law provided.

Investigation into activities of Nazi and Fascist groups in this country will be resumed August 1 by the House Committee Investigating un-American Activities, Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, chairman, announced last night.

Open hearings will be held here throughout August, after which they will shift to the West Coast and then back to Chicago and Pittsburgh, Dies said.

Dies said a corps of investigators, many of them former G-men, had uncovered information that will disturb "real Americans by the implications and definite threats to their liberties which are embraced by these subversive groups involved."

Legislature. Other on the program include the Rev. Robert Gibson, I. R. Dovel, H. R. McKay and E. W. Lauck.

The new facilities at the hospital were made possible by a county-wide drive in the spring, which resulted in sufficient funds being raised for an operating room, equipment, and several smaller rooms.

Bridges Called 'Very Able' Communist

Deportation Witness Says He Went With Alien to Party Sessions

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, July 10.—A Government witness testified at Harry Bridges' deportation hearing today that he had accompanied the West Coast C. I. O. leader to Communist meetings, but Bridges flately denied he was a Communist Party member.

The denial by the 39-year-old labor leader was followed by testimony of Maj. Laurence A. Milner, of Oregon, that the Australian-born Longshoremen's Union official was "a very able member of the Communist Party."

On these two lines was the issue drawn before James M. Landis, dean of Harvard University law school and presiding trial examiner, when the Labor Department's hearing opened at Angel Island, immigration station in San Francisco Bay.

Defense Blames Labor Foes

Landis told defense counsel the Government specifically charges Bridges, who came to this country in 1920, with being a member of the Communist Party of America. The complaint accused him of belonging to an organization which "advocates the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States."

"Those who really prepared the case against Bridges hate Bridges, the C. I. O. and most of all unions," the defense charged in an opening statement, which also accused Raphael P. Bonham, district immigration service director at Seattle, and his assistant, Roy J. Norene, stationed at Portland, Ore., with conspiring to make false charges.

"This false testimony was deliberately prepared outside of the Labor Department, with Bonham and Norene co-operating," the statement added.

Admits He Is Alien

Bridges left the side of his 14-year-old daughter, Jacqueline, to take the witness chair for questioning by Thomas Shoemaker, chief deputy United States commissioner of immigration. As he admitted, he is an alien but denied Communist affiliations.

Miss Carol King, of New York, noted deportation lawyer, and Richard Gladstein and Aubrey Grossman, C. I. O. attorneys, sat at the defense table and smiled with Bridges at Milner's testimony.

Milner, who said he was a World War veteran, identified an affidavit made at Portland, Oreg., September 22, 1937, in which he named Bridges as a Communist. He asserted he associated with Communists for more than four years while he acted as confidential agent for the Oregon National Guard. He stated he accompanied Bridges to Communist Party meetings on several occasions.

Milner quoted Bridges as saying he "wouldn't like the bosses to catch me attending a meeting of this kind." He said Bridges paid Communist Party dues of $2.50 in his presence on one occasion but refused a receipt.

Roosevelt May Order Two More 45,000-Ton Ships

That President Roosevelt may decide next year to sanction construction of two more 45,000-ton super battleships in addition to the pair he ordered recently was considered at least an even bet yesterday in naval circles.

The President's attitude toward building the big ships, as long as other nations engage in such operations, was regarded as clear. If they add to their building programs in this category, it was assumed he would continue to add to that of the United States to match them.

Rep. Andrews Demands Investigation of AAA

Representative Andrews (Republican), of New York, yesterday introduced a resolution for a House investigation of what he termed "political" activities of the Agriculture Adjustment Administration.

He quoted a news story relating that an Alabama county farm agent mailed out notices to farmers to the effect that the AAA had distributed $1,523,780 in benefits to them as an illustration of "extraneous" activity on the agency's part.

Pilot Off on 1-Stop Hop From Pacific Coast to England

San Diego, Calif., July 10 (AP).—In less than 30 seconds today, Pilot Russell Rogers lifted a 15-ton flying boat off San Diego Harbor and headed across the continent on a projected one-stop flight to Felixstowe, England.

Rogers was determined to keep a London dinner engagement Wednesday despite a 24-hour delay in getting away from California.

The only scheduled stop for the huge consolidated model 28-5 craft, built for the British air ministry, was Botwood, Newfoundland, 3,300 miles from San Diego. His Felixstowe destination is 2,450 statute miles from Botwood.

Convict Slain, Pal Seized After Escape From Jail

Pittsfield, Mass., July 10 (U.P.).—A convict was killed and his companion captured at gunpoint tonight—12 hours after they had successfully escaped from "escape-proof" cells in the Berkshire County jail. Earl Burrows, 25, of Pittsfield, fell mortally wounded by a police posse as he and Joseph Martin, 32, of Tarrytown, N. Y., attempted to flee through dense woods. Martin surrendered without resistance.

Scanty Rains Cause Bermuda Water Famine

Hamilton, Bermuda, July 10 (Canadian Press).—The most serious water shortage in years is facing this midocean British colony because of scanty rainfall, its only source of water.

Drinking water is being doled out sparingly, only one bucketful per person. Steamships have brought water from the United States and one hotel is importing 400 tons a week.

20,000 Expected To Attend First Sunset Concert

More than 20,000 music-lovers are expected to line the Potomac shore and Memorial Bridge at 8 p. m. tomorrow for the first of the "Sunset Symphonies" to be played at the Potomac Watergate by the National Symphony Orchestra.

Dr. Hans Kindler will conduct tomorrow night's concert and the last concert of the season, while guest conductors will direct the others. Work on the orchestra barge is being carried on by the WPA in day and night shifts, to be ready for the opening.

The barge has been enlarged this year to include dressing rooms for the operatic product of "Madama Butterfly," to be given August 2.

Special buses to the Watergate from connecting points will be run tomorrow night and on each succeeding concert night. The concerts are to continue Wednesday and Sunday evenings for six weeks.

Parking will be permitted on both sides of Constitution avenue and all other roadways leading to the Watergate. A space near the Lincoln Memorial will be reserved for buses of the Capital Transit Co.

Ecuador Army Uprising Quelled

Quito, Ecuador, July 10 (AP).—A number of Socialist and Revolutionary Vanguard (leftist) politicians were arrested today after the Andinos Cayambe army battalion staged a short-lived revolt against officers.

The revolt began last midnight and ended without bloodshed as the troops withdrew demands for removal of their commander.

13 Germans Slain in Clash, Poles Report

Invasion of Nazi Troops Repulsed, Warsaw Is Told

By International News Service.

Warsaw (Tuesday), July 11.—Thirteen German soldiers have been killed in a skirmish on the German-Polish border, according to unconfirmed reports received by Warsaw newspapers early today.

The reports, reaching Warsaw from Suwalki, said the clash occurred when 20 German soldiers attempted to cross the frontier into Poland.

Polish border guards immediately engaged the German party in a pitched battle. Thirteen of the invaders were said to have been killed outright by machine-gun fire; seven who were reported to have succeeded in crossing the frontier surrendered to Polish authorities.

News of the clash was received in Polish official circles with consternation and served to heighten the tenseness in Polish-Nazi relations because of the critical Danzig situation.

Poles Reassured

Warsaw, July 10 (AP).—Prime Minister Chamberlain's promise today to support Poland in opposing German absorption of Danzig came as welcome reassurance to a nation which has been heavily mobilized for almost four months and under severe nervous and financial strain.

Through this strain, induced by fears that Germany would seize Danzig either from within or without, Poland has clung to the belief she was upholding the peace of Europe as well as her own interests in keeping free access to the Baltic.

Poles considered it had become necessary to convince Berlin there was a limit beyond which Nazi activities in Danzig would not be tolerated. Chamberlain's statement was regarded as an important step in this direction, showing also British-French-Polish solidarity on the matter.

While official sources expressed "satisfaction" at his words, popular opinion went further and greeted his statement with enthusiasm.

Authoritative Poles believed Chamberlain had done much to dispel two suspicions in Polish public opinion—that Britain had not fully accepted the Polish view regarding Danzig and that Britain might not be prepared to share the Polish attitude toward subversive activities in the Free City.

Isolationists Delay Neutrality Tactics

the anti-Administration postponement proposal. A second meeting slated for later in the day was called off, when no change developed in the Foreign Relation Committee's prospective voting alignment.

Two uncommitted Democratic members of the Senate committee, both targets for Administration "purge" efforts in the last campaign, still held the key to committee action—Senator Gillette, of Iowa, and George, of Georgia. Both declined to reveal which way they would vote. This left the committee line-up: Against postponement, 11; for postponement, 10; uncommitted, 2. Despite Gillette's silence, friends were inclined to believe he would vote with the Administration, assuring the needed majority on any motion to proceed.

Senator Borah, following a day of informal conferences with other opponents of arms embargo repeal, told reporters:

"There has been no agreement as to a motion to postpone and it is not known how many votes are in favor of postponement. The only thing I see that seems reasonably certain (at today's meeting) is that the matter of a bill will be taken up."

But Borah added that there was no fixed opposition plan of action, and a motion to postpone consideration of the question is still a possibility.

Besides Borah, present at yesterday morning's opposition strategy conference were Senator Johnson (Republican), of California; Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri; Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin; and Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota. Late yesterday, La Follette conferred again with Borah, but declined to forecast the course of procedure at today's committee meeting.

If postponement proposals are withheld, or defeated, a motion to call up the House neutrality bill will be in order. Providing a direct test on the heart of the present dispute, Administration Senators may then move to strike from the House bill the so-called Vorys amendment, which continues the embargo on arms and ammunition. Here again much would depend on the uncommitted Gillette and George votes, as the committee division on embargo repeal is strikingly similar to the cleavage on the postponement issue.

Another possibility is a motion to call up one of the pending Senate committee measures, such as the Gillette "trade at your own risk" bill or the Pittman "cash and carry" measure.

Recent checks indicate at the present time the opposition could muster only between 35 and 40 votes on an Administration neutrality showdown in the Senate, which is proportionately less than the opposition strength in committee.

Would Force Vote

Should the Foreign Relations Committee block action by postponement or tabling the measure, Administration leaders are believed prepared to go the limit of a Senate motion discharging the committee and forcing it to the floor for a vote.

This threat of a fight to wrest control of the measure from the committee, if pigeonholing is attempted, was considered one factor in the abatement of opposition postponement sentiment yesterday. Some members of the opposition group are known to feel it would be a pyrrhic victory if they prevented action in committee only to be overridden by a Senate discharge motion. By postponement, they would likewise open themselves to an Administration charge that they refused to meet the issue in the Senate on its merits.

Chamberlain Says Britain Will Fight

Didn't Mention Hitler

When he was asked for a statement on the Danzig situation he got up and fished his famous pince nez out of his pocket and droned the statement out as if he were reciting the order of business for the coming week.

The only criticism members made of the statement was that it did not mention Hitler, although the entire statement obviously was directed at him.

Chamberlain held little hope for immediate discussions between Poland and Germany over Danzig, but concluded the statement by pleading "with all concerned" to "declare and show their determination not to allow any incidents in connection with Danzig to assume such a character as might constitute a menace to the peace of Europe."

Nazi Methods Scored

Chamberlain said recent occurrences in Danzig had caused fears "that it is intended to settle her future status by unilateral action organized by surreptitious methods, thus presenting Poland and other powers with a fait accompli." Then he followed with the statement that such action would "at once raise graver issues affecting Polish existence and independence."

Chamberlain defended the status quo in Danzig, but later added that although this status was "neither basically unjust or illogical, it may becapable of improvement."

"It may be that, in a clearer atmosphere, possible improvements could be discussed," he said.

Encouraging Chauvinism

Berlin, July 10 (AP).—German political circles, reacting sharply to Prime Minister Chamberlain's declaration of the British position on Danzig, asserted tonight his statement "changes absolutely nothing."

They charged Britain with "encouraging Polish Chauvinism" and said that, although a "reasonable solution" still could be found for the Danzig problem, "from Berlin the right atmosphere for such a solution cannot be perceived."

"It is particularly deplorable," it was said in these quarters, "that Chamberlain did not mention the wishes of the Danzig citizens."

Officials on Vacation

Meanwhile separate announcements were made that Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop and Col.-Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, chief of staff of the German army, had left Berlin for vocations of "several weeks."

Germans declared that "it was noteworthy that Chamberlain admitted that Poland had mobilized first—on March 23—and only thereafter answered Germany's proposals with a refusal. The prime minister's argument that the British guarantee was not given to Poland until March 31, or eight days after the Poles had taken defensive measures, falls flat."

(Chamberlain made a point of the dates because he said it has been freely stated in Germany" that it was the British guarantee to Poland "which encouraged the Polish government" to take defensive measures.)

Elks Lodge Opposes Foreign Made Flags

Hagerstown, July 10.—The Hagerstown Lodge of Elks has gone on record as opposing the sale of American flags and emblems unless they are made n the United States. While an Elks committee was planning for "Americanization Week" recently, it found that three out of four samples of flags offered were made in Japan.

Either prohibit foreign-made flags or place a high duty on those made outside the United States, the Elks voted in a resolution.

Text of Chamberlain's Speech

By the Associated Press.

London, July 10.—Following is the text of Prime Minister Chamberlain's statement in the House of Commons today on the Danzig situation:

I have previously stated His Majesty's government are maintaining close contact with the Polish and French governments in the question of Danzig.

I have nothing at present to add to the information which has already been given to the House about the local situation but I may perhaps usefully review elements of this question as they appear to His Majesty's government.

Racially Danzig is almost wholly a German city but the prosperity of its inhabitants depends to a very large extent upon Polish trade.

The Vistula is Poland's only waterway to the Baltic and the port at its mouth is therefore of vital strategic and economic importance to her.

Could Strangle Poland

Another power established in Danzig could, if it so desired, block Poland's access to the sea and so exert an economic and military stranglehold upon her.

Those who were responsible for framing the present statute of the Free City were fully conscious of these facts and did their best to make provisions accordingly.

Moreover there is no question of any oppression of the German population in Danzig.

On the contrary, the administration of the Free City is in German hands and the only restrictions imposed upon it are not of a kind to curtail the liberties of its citizens.

The present settlement, though it may be capable of improvement, cannot in itself be regarded as basically unjust or illogical.

The maintenance of the status quo had in fact been guaranteed by the German Chancellor himself up to 1944 by the ten-year treaty which he had concluded with Marshal Pilsudski.

Up till last March, Germany seemed to have felt that while the position of Danzig might ultimately require revision, the question was neither urgent nor likely to lead to serious dispute.

Feared Unilateral Action

But in March, when the German government put forward an offer in the form of certain disiderata accompanied by a press campaign, the Polish government realized they might presently be faced with an unilateral solution which they would have to resist with all their forces.

They had before them events which had taken place in Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Memelland.

Accordingly they refused to accept the German point of view and themselves made suggestions for possible solution ofthe problems in which Germany was interested.

Certain defensive measures were taken by Poland on March 25 and a reply was sent to Berlin on March 26.

I ask the House to note carefully these dates.

It has been freely stated in Germany that it was His Majesty's guarantee which encouraged the Polish government to take the action which I have described, but it will be observed that our guarantee was not given until March 31.

By March 26, no mention of it even had been made to the Polish government.

Stand Behind Poland

Recent occurrences in Danzig have inevitably given rise to fears that it is intended to settle her future status by unilateral action organized by surreptitious methods thus presenting Poland and other powers with a "fait accompli."

In such circumstances any action taken by Poland to restore the situation would, it is suggested, be represented as an act of aggression on her part and, if her action were supported by other powers, they would be accused of aiding and abetting her in the use of force.

If the sequence of events should be such as is contemplated on this hypothesis, the honorable members will realize from what I have said earlier that the issue could not be considered as purely a local matter involving the rights and liberties of Danzigers, which incidently are in no way threatened, but would at once raise graver issues affecting Polish national existence and independence.

We have guaranteed to give our assistance to Poland in case of a clear threat to her independence which she considers is vital to resist with her national forces and we are firmly resolved to carry out this undertatking.

I have said that while the present settlement is neither basically unjust nor illogical, it may be capable of improvement.

It may be that in a clearer atmosphere possible improvements could be discussed, indeed Polish Foreign Minister Col. Beck has himself said in his speech on May 5 that if the government of the Reich is guided by two conditions, namely peaceful intentions and peaceful methods of procedure, all conversations are possible.

In his speech before the Reichstag on April 28, the German Chancellor said that if the Polish government wished to come to fresh contractual arrangements governing its relations with Germany he could but welcome such an idea.

He added that any future arrangements would have to be based on an absolutely clear obligation equally binding on both parties.

His Majesty's government realize that recent developments in the Free City have disturbed confidence and rendered it difficult at present to find an atmosphere in which reasonable counsels can prevail.

In the face of this situation the Polish government has remained calm and His Majesty's government hopes that the Free City with her ancient traditions may again prove as she has done before in her history that different nationalities can work together when their real interests coincide.

Meanwhile I trust that all concerned will declare and show determination not to allow any incidents in connection with Danzig to assume such a character as might constitute a menace to the peace of Europe."

Citizenship Asked For East Indians

A bill to permit East Indians resident in this country for 15 years or more to apply for citizenship was introduced yesterday by Representative John Lesinski (Democrat), of Michigan. They were barred from citizenship by the immigration law of 1924.

Supporting the legislation is the India Welfare League of America, which estimates that 3,000 persons, laborers, farmers and professional men, would be affected. Principal Indian colonies are in Detroit, New York and California.

French Draft Plan to Give Reich Danzig

German Guarantee Of Demilitarization Would Be Necessary

By the Associated Press

Paris, July 10.—A three-point proposal designed to solve the Danzig problem was advanced tonight by semiofficial French sources which indicated the program had Polish approval.

These sources suggested that Germany be allowed technically to incorporate Danzig into the Reich provided that:

Germany guarantees Danzig would be a demilitarized zone.

Polish rights to navigate the Vistula River would not be infringed.

The use of the Free Port of Danzig would be guaranteed to Poland.

Such a solution, these sources said, would satisfy German demands for Danzig based on the fact that its population is overwhelmingly Germanic. At the same time it would not make concessions which Poland has insisted she cannot make without sacrificing her essential economic interests in the Free City.

French diplomatic sources, however, again reiterated that both France and Britain would stand by their pledges to Poland if she considers her vital interests endangered.

Cool Reception to Speech

Free City of Danzig, July 10.—(AP)—Danzig Nazis gave a frigid reception tonight to Prime Minister Chamberlain's statement in London on the Danzig problem.

One party leader declared:

"Mr. Chamberlain contributed nothing and he changed nothing."

More ardent Nazis were scornful while moderate elements in the Free City's leadership said the British attitude toward the Danzig problem was not important.

Free City authorities meanwhile drafted a protest to Poland against an alleged "violation of the frontier" by three Polish soldiers.

Official sources, meanwhile, said the Danzig visit of the United States Ambassador to Warsaw, Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Jr., was purely private."

Biddle, who arrived in the Free City Sunday, called on the League of Nations commissioner, Carl J. Burckhardt, the Polish commissioner and other officials.

Will Remain 'Medical' Envoy

DR. FRANCIS P. CORRIGAN

First U. S. Ambassador To Venezuela to Study Public Health There

Dr. Francis P. Corrigan, Ohio surgeon-diplomat, will sail July 28 on his first trip to Venezuela, as America's first Ambassador to the South American republic.

The 57-year-old envoy sees his job as "a matter of helping to keep relations between the two countries as friendly as they are today." He also hopes "to take a constructive interest in public health problems down there."

Venezuela presents "a unique economic picture," Dr. Corrigan said yesterday. "The country is free of external debt and developing very rapidly."

Dr. Corrigan's Latin-American experience began more than 20 years ago when he served as chief surgeon in a Chilean hospital. During the 1920's he traveled extensively in South and Central America organizing chapters of the American College of Surgeons.

"The transition from medical diplomacy to Government diplomacy came in 1934," he explained, with his appointment as minister to San Salvador. Three years later he became minister to Panama.

His assignment to Venezuela was announced last December, shortly after the decision to raise the American mission there from the rank of ministry to embassy. He is in Washington for two weeks of consultation with State Department officials.

Japanese Form New Branch of Chinese Party

Shanghai, Tuesday, July 11 (U.P.).—The Japanese army today began formation of a new branch of the Chinese nationalist party—the Kuomintang—which will be headed by former Chinese Premier Wang Ching-Wei.

Wang, who deserted Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's nationalist Chinese government in Chungking and issued a statement urging end of the undeclared Chinese-Japanese war, was in Tsingtao, Shantung Province.

Highest leaders of the pro-Japanese central and North China governments were in conference there and were expected to adopt a manifesto urging all Chinese to adhere to their branch of the Nationalist Party.

It was believed that Peiping—or Peking as the northern capital has been renamed by the new regime—will be declared the national capital of all China, merging the two regimes.

Democracies Union Urged To Curb War

Combine of 15 Nations Proposed To U. Va. Institute

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., July 10.—Clarence K. Streit, foreign correspondent for 20 years, said tonight the prospect to organize a Federal union of democracies was gaining favor both in this country and abroad.

Streit, whose book "Union Now" has led to the formation of unionist organizations in the United States and several foreign countries, contended that combinations for collective security of the League of Nations type must be replaced by the kind of union existing in this country, Canada, South Africa and Switzerland.

There is still a fighting chance, he told the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia, to preserve the peace of the world if a start is made now "by organizing a nucleus of a few peoples that are most experienced in organizing government by mutual consent" and "that have power enough to assure" keeping of the peace.

Would Ban War 2 Ways

Streit said such a union would "prevent war two ways." It would make "war hopeless by making the union far too powerful to be attacked," and it would make war "useless by making it possible for outsiders to be admitted peacefully into the union once they desire to enjoy its freedom for the individual," he asserted.

As an example, he added, the German people "would then have a tremendous incentive to overthrow Hitler, for only by attacking him, instead of us, and restoring their rights as men could they possibly gain the great advantages that membership in the union would bring each of its citizens."

The 15 democracies suggested by the speaker for the union were the United States, Canada, Britain, France, Switzerland, Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Finland, Ireland, the Union of South Africa, Australia and New Zealand.

World's Best Neighbors

"No two of these 15 have had a war between them for more than 100 years," he continued. "They are the best neighbors the world has ever known. Never have so many neighboring sovereign states covering so huge an area been at peace so long a time.

"Everyone of these 15 does most of its import-export business with the other 14, each has made its national government for the same purpose, individual freedom, each now feels this freedom endangered and each is arming to defend this common heritage, separately."

Earlier today Wendell Berge, special assistant to the U. S. Attorney General, told the institute that a "vigorous policy of antitrust enforcement" would stimulate business.

Berge contended that such a policy "will break the log-jam that is choking us with our own wealth, will free channels of distribution, and pave the way for full realization of our productive capacity."

C. I. O. Adviser Speaks

William Jett Lauck, economic adviser to John L. Lewis, of the C. I. O. and acting chairman of the national policy board of the American Association for Economic Freedom, argued that Government regulations and control of the Nation's basic industries under a program of economic planning within the framework of the present business system is necessary to avoid a nation-wide crisis and collapse.

A third speaker, Thomas C. Blaisdell, jr., chief of monopoly study for the Securities and Exchange Commission, said that when the people of the Nation have learned to use their savings "we shall have found one way for the lower third of the community to produce the goods and services which it needs."

America must not "adopt the army system of distribution," Berge warned. "That system is roughly represented by the authoritarian states of Europe in which a regimented industry is controlled by the iron hand of government and effective distribution of goods is thus secured.

"What we do want is to direct our efforts toward adjusting our traditional competitive economy so that we can obtain a maximum use of modern productive capacity by our people. Our problem is to make free and independent enterprise really function effectively as a producer and distributor of wealth."

Lauck asserted that "the New Deal, so far as fundamental, constructive policies are concerned, is at an impasse. Its condition is not one of stalemate or defeat. Its activities are prodigious, humanistic, inspiring and reformative. But it has come to a 'dead-end' in that it now has nothing fundamental to offer which enables us to envision a future in which there will be assurance of re-employment, economic well-being and genuine democracy."

Fire-Fighting Test Momentarily Out of Control

When this photo was made yesterday at Beltsville, Md., during fire-fighting tests by the Bureau of Standards and the Federal Fire Council, 600 gallons of gasoline had blazed beyond control of firemen. Carbon dioxide gas was being tested as a means of extinguishing oil fires and this was the test of fighting an unconfined blaze. It was extinguished after burning several trees

Beltsville Pines Periled By Fire Tests

D. C. Firemen Put Out Gasoline Blaze Set to Try Carbon Dioxide

A gasoline fire endangered the pine woods at the Beltsville Agricultural Farm yesterday when Bureau of Standards' experiments with carbon dioxide failed to quell the stubborn blaze.

The woods were threatened in the second of three experiments. Four barrels of gasoline, containing 220 gallons, were ignited. A stiff breeze whipped the blaze toward the woods and several trees caught fire before District firemen arrived.

Battalion Chief Clement Murphy, director of the District Fire Department's instruction unit, suffered second degree burns on his hand and minor burns on his face. He was treated at the scene.

Kerosene Extinguished

The first experiment likewise proved a failure. Six hundred gallons of gasoline were ignited in a pool partly filled with water. Firemen poured a steady stream of carbon dioxide on the blaze for three minutes and 15 seconds before giving up the experiment as a bad job.

The only successful test was made with 600 gallons of kerosene poured on top of a pool of water. The carbon dioxide gas extinguished the blaze in 1 minute. Bureau officials said kerosene is not so volatile as gasoline.

S. H. Ingberg, chief of the fire assistance section of the Bureau of Standards, in charge of the test, said he had no comment.

Test on Building Today

A similar experiment will be made today at the old Firestone Building which is soon to be razed. Officials said they expected the carbon dioxide to make a better showing indoors, where air currents are less strong.

Purpose of the experiments was to find a way to fight fires without causing water damage. Carbon dioxide, it was explained, does not damage property. It is supposed to "smother the fire."

Present at the experiments were executives of carbon dioxide manufacturing concerns and W. P. Biggs, safety engineer for the Navy. Perhaps 300 spectators watched the tests.

U. S. Protests to Japanese On Bombings at Chungking

The Japanese government yesterday incurred an emphatic protest from the United States Government for endangering the lives of Ambassador Nelson T. Johnson and other Americans in the "indiscriminate" bombings, July 6 and 7, of China's capital, Chungking.

Secretary of State Hull, it was learned summoned Japanese Ambassador Kensuke Horinouchi to his office to impress upon him the seriousness of the protests, which American Charge d'Affairs Eugene Dooman laid before Japanese Foreign Minister Arita in Tokyo.

Willis Peck, American consul at Chungking cabled reports of one projectile exploding within 300 yards of the American Embassy, with resultant damage from splinters and concussion. He reported anoher bomb had burst 150 yards from his own dwelling.

Other bombs rained down during recurrent night raids and fell close to an American destroyer and a British gunboat anchored in the river, while one missile wrecked the Lewis Memorial Chapel of the Methodist Episcopal Church, cables revealed.

Ambassador Johnson and his staff, having taken shelter in the embassy, were endangered when bomb splinters raked the grounds and pocked the outside walls, the department was informed.

The raid, sharpest of a series the Japanese have launched against Chinese Gen. Chaing Kai-Shek's political and military headquarters, devastated some sections of the city with heavy loss of Chinese lives and property, reports said.

Russia Protests

Tientsin, July 10 (AP).—The Soviet Russian Consul General, M. J. Smirnoff, today protested against delays imposed on Soviet citizens going in and out of the blockaded British and French concessions.

He told the Japanese consulate that Japanese gendarmes repeatedly made Russians go back to the end of the waiting line and also delayed entry of milk from Soviet dairies outside.

Three Chinese rivermen on two vessels of a British concern in the Hai River were wounded today when Japanese soldiers fired from the shore.

Mrs. Szymczak Wins Divorce

Chicago, July 10 (AP).—Mrs Helen Szymczak, of Oak Park, Ill., was granted an uncontested divorce today in superior court from Menceslaus Szymczak, of Washington, member of the Federal Reserve System Board of Governors.

Judge Rudolph F. Desort awarded custody of a daughter, Mary, 17, to Mrs. Szymczak. Mrs. Szymczak's attorney, William A. McSwain, said she received an out-of-court settlement in lieu of alimony. The couple was married January 15, 1916.

D.C. Appeals Court Upholds Howard U. Dismissal of Cobb

Dismissal of James A. Cobb, former municipal judge from his law professorship at Howard University was upheld yesterday by the District Court of Appeals.

Justice Rutledge wrote the opinion, his first since he ascended the bench. Judge Cobb's claim that he was entitled to hold his place for life failed, Justice Rutledge said, because the act incorporating the university gave the trustees power "to remove any professor . . . when the interests of the university shall require it."

Judge Cobb claimed that he was dismissed because he opposed certain appropriations for the school in testimony before a Congressional committee.

'Clouds Over Europe' Is Tip-Top Entertainment

Comedy-Melodrama Opens at Keith's Tonight; A Young, Local Playwright Steps Ahead; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

"CLOUDS OVER EUROPE." Columbia Pictures' filmization of an original story by Brock Williams and Jack Whittington and Arthur Wimperis, adapted to the screen by Ian Dalrymple, featuring Laurence Olivier, Ralph Richardson and Valerie Hobson, with George Curson, George Merritt, Gus McNaughton, David Tree, Sandra Storme, Hay Petrie, Frank Fox, George Butler, Gordon McLeod and John Longdon. Directed by Tim Whelan. Previewed Monday afternoon. At RKO-Keith's Theater, beginning tonight.

PRODUCED IN ENGLAND with an all-English cast, "Clouds Over Europe," opening at RKO-Keith's tonight, nevertheless quite catches the spirit of American mystery-comedy-romances and provides as enlivening an hour-and-a-half's entertainment as anyone would care to enjoy.

BELL

It is an espionage story in the British airplane factories that we have here, but one that does not take itself too seriously. There are mystery and suspense in the action, to be sure, but there also are heavy sprinklings of delightfully whimsical comedy and romance that does not always run smoothly. The combination is one of the happiest that has come to the screen in many months—due not only to the brittle texture of the story, but equally to the superlative manner in which it is played by a sterling cast, the three principals of which already are favorites of audiences on this side.

As the story opens, one of Scotland Yard's chief operatives is remarking upon the extraordinary coincidence of the complete disappearance of test planes bearing important new mechanical developments under identical circumstances in various parts of the globe. The thing speedily becomes more specific than that. The largest airplane factory in England is sending up a new high-speed ship, supposedly equipped with a new supercharger. It disappears without trace. That is, without trace to everyone except Maj. Hammond, of Scotland Yard. He smells foreign spies and goes about hunting out the rats. The second test plane takes off and apparently meets the same fate as its immediate predecessor—only this time developments far out at sea are such as to bring the action to a thrilling gun battle on the decks of the S. S. Vinking, ostensibly a salvage ship, but in fact the receiver of the missing planes, which it brings down with a powerful electric ray that disables both engines and radio.

That, of course, is the merest fragmentary sketch of the plot and conveys no notion of the gay and carefree manner in which it is unfolded upon the screen. This quality of subtle humor and persistent effervescence is attributable primarily to the exceptionally deft performances brought to their roles by Ralph Richardson, as the seemingly fumbling Maj. Hammond; Laurence Olivier, as the suspicious pilot, who finally traps the foreign spy ring aboard the Viking, and Valerie Hobson, as Kay Hammond, a young newspaper woman, with an uncanny sense for news and some things that are not news.

Cast Boasts Three Stars

Ralph Richardson's portrayal of the sleuth whose superiors think him constantly bungling his job—although he always turns up with the right solution and the culprits in the end—is an unending delight. Mr. Richardson, remembered for his Mercutio, with Katharine Cornell and Maurice Evans in "Romeo and Juliet," here proves that he is as facile a comedian as he is able serious actor. His precious umbrella furnishes an unobtrusive travesty of a noted English statesman. Of Mr. Olivier only the reminder is needed that it was he who did so splendid a piece of work in "Wuthering Heights." His opportunities are not so great in "Clouds Over Europe," but such as he has he discharges with accustomed skill. Valerie Hobson, one of the beauties of the British cinema, is as sparkling and vivacious in the role of Kay Hammond as her brother in the play is quietly and drolly humorous.

The members of the supporting cast are not as well known over here as they will be once the excellence of this picture becomes noised abroad. George Merritt, as the head of the airplane factory, who would not believe that anything was amiss at his plant; Sandra Storme, as the lovely show girl Maj. Hammond kept putting off until she married somebody else; George Butler, as Air Marshall Gosport; George Curson, as Jenkins, and numerous others captured the interest and approval of the drama desks at yesterday afternoon's preview.

Preceding the feature, Manager Hardie Meakin, of Keith's, ran off the new issue of the "March of Time," which also will be shown on the new bill, opening tonight at 7:50. This is the one that heralds the fact that "The Movies March On" and, within the limited scope of its running time, presents a comprehensive review of the development of the American motion picture from its infancy in 1907 to the present. It embodies excerpts from many famous old films, each marking an epoch of progress, and will prove immensely nostalgic to those whose memories can keep pace with it. The Disney cartoon comedy, "Sea Scouts," is being held over and the Pathe News will complete a program that no alert theatergoer should miss.

Washington's youthful playwright, Leo Brady, seems destined for a distinguished career as a dramatist. His latest play, "Brother Orchid," has been articled for by Warner Brothers as a potential starring vehicle for Edward G. Robinson. It is the story of a Public Enemy No. 1, who comes to the end of his "ride" in a mythical monastery. Members of the Blackfriars and students of Catholic University gave "Brother Orchid" a successful presentation last Friday night, under the direction of Father Gilbert V. Hartke, O. P. The role of Little John Sarto, who later becomes Brother Orchid, was played by Anthony Messuri. Edgar Ford, Clarence Wittler, Richard Boulger and other Blackfriar veterans afforded capable support as a group of tough lads from the metropolitan badlands.

The fourth Festival Program, sponsored by the Community Center Department and the Office of National Capital Parks, is scheduled for tonight at 8:15 at the National Sylvan Theater, at the foot of the Washington Monument. The bill will be the Roosevelt-Eckington Players' production of Louis N. Parker's delightful English comedy of "Pomander Walk"—a little by-street in England, where gossip runs rife, as the saying is. It was a stage hit many years ago with Lennox Pawle in the stellar role. Tonight's performance will be preceded by a half-hour's band concert, beginning at 7:45.

Speaking of revivals, as we were inferentially, the Little Theater announces the Marx Brothers in "Animal Crackers" as chief feature of its new bill, beginning tomorrow. This ancient item was produced so long ago that the Little management was forced to solicit the entire Eastern United States for photographs and publicity material on the production. It was a pretty funny business, back there in 1930.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, July 10.

THE FRONT pages recently reported that King Zog of Albania and his Queen are coming to America soon . . . This is the real story: On April 17 Zog received a cable from an American company, offering him an executive job at $40,000 a year, in addition to the expenses involved in bringing his family to America. Zog has evinced interest in the proposition, and the negotiations now are being made . . . The company which thereby will become the employer of a King is the one which was the first to sign Beryl Markham, the flier. It's the Neva-Wet Corporation of America.

AT THE premiere of the Bucks County Playhouse, where Edward Everett Horton nad Julie Haydon are appearing in "Springtime for Henry," Richard Bennett—who directs the Playhouse's school—made the dedicatory address before the curtain went up . . . He concluded his speech with the prayer that "we can bring to New Hope, Pa., the spirit of Stroudsburg" . . . Bennett then sat down, and the audience waited for the play to begin . . . After a few minutes they noticed Bennett waving frantically for their attention . . . He cleared his throat and said: "I meant 'Salzburg.'"

THE FEDERAL Theater's production of "Pinocchio," doomed by the recent legislation which killed the Federal Theater project, may be taken over by Max Gordon, the Broadway producer . . . The opening of John Frederics' new establishment will feature a group of ladies being fitted inside of huge bird cages . . . The newspapers published the story that Eleanor Roosevelt traveled in a CCC camp truck to see Paul Green's "The Lost Colony" at Roanoke Island. No mention, however, was made of the fact that Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., was in the same truck. They returned the same way—back to the private hunting club, where they were staying.

THE BUSINESS at the World's Fair grounds still is disappointing to the Amusement Area concessionaires . . . George Jessel, who is presenting "Little Old New York"—featuring Steve Brodie's leap from the Brooklyn Bridge—was complaining about conditions . . . "It's so tough," Jessel lamented, "that yesterday, when Steve Brodie jumped—he jumped into another concession."

MILTON BERLE, whose engagement at the International Casino was terminated on July 5, will rejoin the cast there, as part of the new show, next Thursday . . . The Pierre Roof, which recently installed an $18,000 cooling system, will close on July 12 for lack of business . . . Bert Lahr, who, according to the advance reports, gives a remarkable performance in "The Wizard of Oz," will return to Broadway tomorrow . . . The Giants-Dodgers bitter baseball rivalry already has benefited the Dodgers' professional football team. Dan Topping, owner of the Brooklyn football team, has more advance orders now than he had last September.

JOE PHILLIPS, the newspaper correspondent, will go to Europe on an assignment from News-Week magazine . . . Raymond Massey will arrive in Hollywood August 1 to submit to make-up tests for the movie adaptation of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" . . . Emile Gauvreau, editor of Click magazine, will break open his feud with Time magazine because of their uncomplimentary references to him. Gauvreau will retaliate against Henry Luce . . . Every customer who enters the gaming room at Ripley's new Odditorium on Broadway will be given a million dollars in counterfeit money.

THE SECURITIES and Exchange Commission will meet with the officials of the New York Stock Exchange to discuss plans for a Brokerage Bank, or some adequate substitute, for the protection of customers of New York brokerage houses . . . Sam Leibowitz, the famed criminal lawyer, already has created a powerful organization to get the district attorney's job in Brooklyn . . . Finis Farr's report from Rome is that Mussolini is so displeased at King Victor Emmanuel's refusal to heed his orders that Benito finally warned the King: "The next time you disobey I'll remove your picture from the sardine cans."

WILLIAM F. GREEN, president of the American Federation of Labor, has intervened in the dispute between the American Federation of Actors and its parent union, the 4 A's . . . . The AFA is scheduled to be tried by the governing board of the 4 A's, and alleges that not only has the 4 A's no jurisdiction but that such a trial would have the prosecutors also act as judges . . . Green has written a letter to the 4 A's, suggesting that he be allowed to appoint a committee of three impartial men to mediate the dispute.

Karen Morley Wins Acclaim At the Olney

Karen Morley and "Susan and God" clip off a crisp second week for Mr. Cochran's comfortable summer theater at Olney, Md. The Rachel Crothers comedy of last season opened its week's engagement before an all-but-capacity audience last evening.

The screen player is more blonde and, we thought, better-looking on the stage than in the films. In the role Gertrude Lawrence played for the first time at the National Theater, she was obviously at her ease. Her Susan, who has come so triumphantly upon the Oxford movement to the utter disgust of her friends, is a youthful, naive woman, strangely enough the mother of almost-grown girl. Her preoccupied dismay at her responsibility for the girl grows from a surface reaction to a sincere realization.

How Susan, her own life verging on a weary mess, rushes home from England, filled with the new movement as a palliative for her friends, makes as amusing a situation as one could want for a play. Miss Crothers' witty lines and careful technique tie the story of a family's regeneration into a neatly knit comedy.

The supporting roles are in the hands of the Olney's resident company. Dorothy Blackburn, as the cynical and raspy-voiced Charlotte, friend of the family, won many laughs last night and Jacqueline Brundage, in her metamorphosis at Blossom, handled a hard part convincingly. Frank McNellis was an older-looking husband than one would expect for so youthful a wife, and while his reading was slow, the result was more than adequate.

John Hayden's direction, to which further performances will add more polish, was swiftly paced and brought bright zest to a play and performer who will more than repay a jaunt out to Olney. An evening with Susan in that breezy, playhouse will surely knock the heat for you.

Roadside

"The Fatal Brand," a melodrama in three acts and eight scenes, by W. Thompson Townsend, which inaugurated a two-week's engagement at the Roadside Theater last night, is a play of the old school that goes in grandiloquently for flamboyant speech, eloquent "asides" and all of the other trademarks of the type of drama that flourished in the days before the turn of the century.

The eight scenes of this ancient work are prolific in opportunities for the audience to hiss the villain and villainess and cheer the heroes. In addition to its between-the-scenes singing—if that is what it was—those in attendance last night, as usual, shouted frequent bits of advice to the heroine in her moments of deepest distress. Most of the advice was good, even if not immediately acted upon. This, no doubt, was the audience's method of supplying "action," the element in which "The Fatal Brand" is most deficient.

Director Ralph S. Fowler has cast his piece well. Betty Gray is extravagantly plaintive, wistful and harassed as Pauline, the young Italian villager, unjustly convicted of a theft she did not commit and branded with the symbol of the social outcast. Richard Kreuzeburg appears as Henry Vivian, the young Englishman whom she marries, and Paul Messink does nobly by the noble part of Phillipe Ramagean, befriended former convict who becomes a strong arm of the law and brings Louis Bertrand and his consort, Elise, to eventual justice. These roles are efficiently played by Milton Freedman and Natalie Core. You won't recognize Miss Core, made up to look like Dorothy Lamour! Theodore Tiller 2d, and Betty Brunstetter provide the "comedy relief" in nimble fashion.

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, July 10 (INS).—Talked with Hal Wallis over the telephone in New York today and heard from him enthusiastic plans to produce a story dealing with the famous Reuters News Agency. Hal just docked on the Normandie, the same boat that brought Mary Pickford, Buddy Rogers, Myrna Loy, Arthur Hornblow and Elsa Lanchester (Mrs. Charles Laughton) back to the U. S. A., and he had all the zest of a man who has had a three-month holiday.

LOUELLA PARSONS

"I bought the Reuters story in London," he told me, and it describes how Reuters established a pigeon service to carry news before the invention of telegraph. He will produce it in London and hopes to send over some of our top stars. I won't know which ones until I talk with Jack Warner."

Hal, Louise Fazenda and their young son trained out of New York tonight for Hollywood. He said they had visited Norway, Sweden and England and that while London is a bit jittery over the war threats, theater business is surprisingly good.

Alice Marble, whom Carole Lombard tried her best to get into the movies, won't have to beg for a chance now. Two film companies are bidding for the new tennis champion and, since Alice is as pretty as she is able with the tennis racket, you will see her, I have no doubt, in a story something on the order of Sonja Henie's first ice-skating epic. In fact, Frank Orsatti, her agent, was so excited over the Wimbledon match, he wouldn't leave for the Derby at Hollywood Park Saturday until Alice telephoned him she had won from Kay Stammers, the British ace. Frank also manages Sonja and he did very well by her, signing her with Darryl Zanuck.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Rita Johnson flew East to applaud Ligarmti, the Lin Howard thoroughbred, when it runs at Suffolk on Wednesday. So, it appears, she is head woman in his life; Rene Ray had her first taste of night life in Hollywood when she went stepping with Bob Benchley and William Burnside; the Everett Riskins really turned their house into a plantation at their party honoring Bob. Magnolia blossoms bloomed unexpectedly on trees, a Negro orchestra in costume, food that smacked of the ole South and costumes of 1860 were much in evidence. Dick Barthelmess stole honors by appearing as Simon Legree. Jesse wore a most becoming befo' de wah costume. Kay Francis arrived late, escorted by Louis Bromfield; Binnie Barnes, in a huge picture hat, came with Mike Frankovitch.

Mrs. Walter Connolly came as a Spanish lady of the period. Benny Rubin was so disguised as an aged Union soldier, no one recognized him. The young set is getting in on all the parties given for Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon. Harold Lloyd, jr., is entertaining Wednesday for Barbara Bebe Lyon and Judy Goetz is hostess to her Thursday; George Raft nearly had a stroke when a photographer was necessary to determine whether his Image of War or Twist won on Saturday. He lost by inches. His Vain Bo ran a creditable race also in the $25,000 derby; Wally Beery is really spoiling Carol Ann. He took her to Victor Hugos for Sunday dinner, dressed in evening dress with an ermine cape, which, at 8 years, is a little young for such furbelows; Tom Neal is keeping Jean Parker company at the La Conga while her husband is East. That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., July 10.—(Leo McCarey, was responsible for "Love Affair." He started with nothing more than a crippled young lady waiting for the theater to empty, so she could be wheeled out. Yes, he saw that incident.—H. H.)

By Leo McCarey.

DEAR HEDDA: So you're going away for a rest, hey? Well, it's my guess that when you step off the train the first person you'll meet will ask you how to get into the movies. It's always that way when they know you're from Hollywood. Lots of people have asked me, and about all I can tell them is a little story about myself.

Maybe you don't know it, but I set out to become a lawyer. In my youth, most California families wanted their sons to be doctors r lawyers. My father held to the law and thought me perverse because in turn I wanted to be a song-writer, cartoonist, actor and writer. So finally father got me into the U. S. C. law school, across the street from the Times.

It was pretty tough on father. For when I should have graduated, I told him I still had to go to law school another year.

"But, Leo," he said, "I thought it was a three-year course!"

I had to tell him it was for some fellows, but only a four-year course would get me through.

Anyway, I graduated and practiced until one day a client walked into my office and said his wife was suing for divorce, which he didn't mind, and alimony, which he didn't want to pay, and would I defend him? He painted her as a terrible creature who made his life a living hell.

Imagine my dismay when the case came to trial and I saw the wife. She was a wisp of a Lillian Gish type who looked like 3 feet in the grave. When she finished her testimony, I was wilted and asked for a recess.

But now, resigned from a legal career with fame as a songwriter dimming, I persuaded Dave Butler to introduce me to Tod Browning. Motion pictures had been marching on and I wanted to get into them. I had tried unsuccessfully many times. Once I persuaded a masseur for movie moguls, named Abdul the Turk, to speak a good word for me, but nothing came of it. However, Dave introduced me to Tod Browning, and he invited me to Universal to become his thrid assistant.

One day I timidly made a suggestion to my boss. He thanked me and incorporated my idea in a Lon Chaney picture he was doing. I was so thrilled, I sat through the picture three times. The idea was for Chaney at a crucial moment to light a cigarette. Those were five very happy years I spent with Tod Browning, and insofar as one man can teach his art to another he taught me.

You know, I often wonder how much downright luck enters into any man's little sheaf of success. I know it has in mine. For instance, during my years at Universal I used to sneak over to the athletic club for a game or two of handball. It was there I met and played with Hal Roach.

Well, that's all there is to this business of getting into the movies. That's what you can tell people when they up and ask you.

Havelock Ellis, Sociologist, Dies at 80

Writer Who Battled Sex Taboos Worked Until 2 Months Ago

By the Associated Press.

London, July 10.—Henry Havelock Ellis, who started battling taboos on sex in the midst of the prim Victorian era, is dead at 80.

ELLIS

Bothered by a throat ailment, which made speech difficult, and a general decline in health, the author, doctor, philosopher and scientist was forced to discontinue writing two months ago.

He died Saturday night at Hintlesham, near Ipswich in Suffolk to which he retired a year ago.

Americans were the first to recognize and publish this Englishman's voluminous works on sex psychology, to which he devoted a life of study. England banned them as obscene in 1898 and only in recent years were they published here. Englishmen for the most part read his American editions.

He chose to strike at sex taboos and preach a doctrine of frank discussion in the interests of mental and physical health while teaching in Australia, to which he had journeyed with his sailor father as a youth.

A man of many contrasts, he advocated nudism but did not belong to a colony.

He married Edith Lees, an author, in 1891 but they maintained separate homes—she in Cornwall and he in London. From time to time one visited the other but often they took vacations apart. She died in 1916. They had no children.

Ellis disliked typewriters, refused to dictate and wrote always in longhand. His country study was a room on a turntable so the windows could be swung always toward the sun.

He started publishing in 1890 and wrote steadily until illness came, because "writing keeps me alive."

McNutt to Get Security Post

possibility that Attorney General Murphy would be shifted over to the War Department as Secretary. Due to Murphy's crusades, the President has been under great pressure to give him another assignment, it is understood. If he should be moved out of the Justice Department, Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson likely would succeed him.

Reports were circulated that Wayne Coy, who has been associated with McNutt since 1933, would be named assistant security administrator. Coy was secretary to McNutt when he was Governor, later became works progress administrator in Indiana, and accompanied McNutt to Manila as his secretary. He formerly was a Hoosier newspaper editor.

The security job was offered McNutt, it was learned, at the luncheon with the President on his arrival here from Manila last Thursday. McNutt, however, wanted to roll the thing over in his mind. He talked with his political advisers about it—explored it from every angle.

Yesterday he called at the White House again for a short interview with the President. At that time, it is believed, he notified the President he would accept.

Hopkins Used Influence

Secretary of Commerce Hopkins, it was reported, induced the President to offer McNutt the place.

McNutt will go through with his projected speechmaking tour in the late summer and fall, it is expected, but he will speak presumably as a New Dealer if not as an Administration spokesman.

News that he was to be given the security position caused considerable comment in Congress. Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, saw in it an attempt to "build McNutt up for 1940," while Senator Johnson (Democrat), Colorado, remarked that McNutt "is placing his whole political destiny in the President's hands."

Youth in Lung Won't Have to Die On 21st Birthday

Beacon, N. Y., July 10 (AP).—The law was stretched today so that a youth in an "iron lung" at Vassar Hospital will not have to die next Thursday—the day he becomes 21.

For seven years and nine months, Birdsall Sweet has been confined in an artificial respirator which enables him to breathe and survive the ravages of infantile paralysis.

Without the "lung" he would die in a little more than six hours—the longest period he has been able to breathe for himself.

As long as he was a legal minor, the youth has been entitled to financial help from the State Education Department and Dutchess County. But on reaching his majority, he would no longer be legally entitled to aid. His father could not bear the cost alone.

County Judge H. Gordon Flannery informed Gov. Lehman and the governor called in his legal advisers who found that if they weren't "too careful" in their definition of the law, the State Health Department could help out.

U. S. Observer Sees Air War In Mongolia

Watches Fight in Which Japanese Say They Shot Down 16 Soviet Planes

By John G. Morris.

United Press Staff Correspondent.

With Japanese Troops at Manchukuo-Outer Mongolia Border, July 10.—Standing on the edge of the Japanese army base three miles east of the Khalka River at 2 p. m. today I saw a fierce aerial combat in which, according to official Japanese figures, Mongolia-Soviet forces lost 16 planes.

One Japanese plane made a forced landing.

I saw one plane which I could not identify fall in flames and one make a forced landing before the fight moved on to the northeast out of sight.

Japanese headquarters said 88 Soveit planes were shot down on this front today.

Since 1 p. m. we have been constantly within three miles of the Khalka River toward which the Japanese say the Mongolian-Soviet troops are being pushed.

The Japanese positions, which are within sight, were subjected to intermittent aerial and artillery bombardment in the afternoon.

Tokyo, Tuesday, July 11.—(U.P.)—Capt. Hiroki Nohara, who has just returned after observing the fighting on the Manchukuo-Outer Mongolia border, said in an interview today that "the Soviets have terrific gunfire, excellent guns and enormous supply of tanks."

"Their infantry charge is formidable," he said. "Usually the charge is accompanied by from 50 to 60 tanks, which come over like waves during stormy weather. No sooner is one wave smashed by our anti-tank guns than another appears. The Japanese fire is efficient, one out of every three shots destroying a tank.

"Practically none of the occupants of the crippled tanks escaped, being cremated within the iron walls. Our infantry also destroyed many tanks by throwing gasoline on the heated metal, causing it to burst into flames.

"There were few Mongolians among the attackers.

"The Soviet bombing planes were inefficient. However, the gunners are expert at strafing ground troops. I expect they will use more efficient planes in the future."

The newspaper Asahi said that a total of 517 Soviet planes had been brought down in the border warfare.

$393,000,000 N. Y. Budget Enacted

Albany, N. Y., July 10 (U.P.).—The Republican-controlled New York Legislature, in special session, tonight enacted a $393,000,000 State budget for the 1939-40 fiscal year already ten days old.

A bill re-enacting portions of the budget invalidated by State courts was rushed through both Houses by party votes and sent to Gov. Lehman. The re-enacted measure retained $23,000,000 in reductions in Lehman's original budget.

Textile Man Says He'll Close Plant If Pay Is Too High

By the Associated Press.

Adoption of a universal 32½-cent minimum wage for the cotton textile industry would mean "calamity" for 250 small Southern mills, L. T. Barringer, Memphis, Tenn., cotton merchant, said yesterday.

Barringer, opposing the proposed minimum wage, on which Administrator Elmer F. Andrews of the wage-hour division is conducting public hearings, predicted jute, paper, burlap, silk and rayon would replace cotton if labor costs were boosted.

Barringer was joined by an Arkansas cotton mill operator who indicated he would close his plant if the wage minimum were adopted without differentials in favor of the Southwest.

James R. Wikle, manager of the Magnolia, Ark., mills, told Andrews "we might get by with a 30-cent minimum, but I don't see how we could operate at 32½ cents."

Barred From Park, Boys Play in Alley

out of danger from street and alley traffic without as much as a second glance from passing policemen. But now things are different, for reasons given below.

One concrete solution to the current playground problem, which these youngsters illustrate was revealed yesterday at the Wheatley School ground, Montello avenue and Neal street northeast. While municipal and civic leaders have been seeking ways and means to open 112 closed school play spots, Mrs. Walter Jones, of 1164 Morse street northeast, has acted. Singlehanded, she is providing safe recreation for children in her neighborhood.

A member of the Wheatley Parent-Teacher Association, Mrs. Jones, without compensation, has taken over supervision of the grounds. With volunter workers from her association, she remains at the playground throughout the day, directing play and overseeing safety. Determined that Wheatley should not become one of the playgrounds barred to vacationing youngsters, she agreed at the close of school to keep the lot open.

New Commission to Meet

The new playground commission, appointed last week by the Commissioners, is expected to meet within the next few days. A study of conditions is now underway and recommendations affecting the closed grounds will be forthcoming at the first meeting, according to C. Melvin Sharpe, school board member.

The Concord avenue property where ball-playing youngsters are banner is owned by the Federal Government and is under control of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. The two-block-long strip of grassy park extends from Fifth to Third street between Concord avenue and Madison street. In close by are four other plots, smaller in size, but each bearing the "no ball playing" signs.

The largest strip of parking is removed from residences and valuable property. It would take super strength for any young ball player to drive a "hit" far enough to cause damage.

"They won't even let us toss a ball on the lot," lamented a tow-headed youngster with bat and glove in hand, "so that's why we play in the street or in this alley."

Long Walk to Takoma

The children explained they could go to the Takoma Park Recreation Center at Fourth and Van Buren streets, but it is a long trek. They have another choice, the Phillips playground in an alley between Eighth and Ninth, Madison and Longfellow streets, but it is too tiny for much ball playing.

Park police said the signs were erected on the Concord avenue parking strip because the "children were always chasing balls into the street and might get hurt."

Older boys and even fathers of the neighborhood were given a share of blame for the "no ball playing" warnings. Police said the elders took possession of the lot for their own games and frequently drove balls into neighboring front yards.

Several residents of the community, Park and Planning officials said, agreed to keep their children off the parking if it was sodded and beautified.

But until the area is removed to make way for the projected Fort drive, it must remain useless and neighborhood children must continue to risk their lives by playing in the street.

Torso Slayer Tries Suicide Before Lie Test

Questioned Two Hours With Detector About The Missing Skull

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, July 10.—Scores of questions were put tonight to Frank Dolezal, confessed slayer of one of Cleveland's 12 "torso murder" victims, in a lie detector test after officials reported they twice kept Dolezal from hanging himself.

Sheriff Martin L. O'Donnell handed a list of 100 questions to Paul Beck, operator of the polygraph.

Beck questioned Dolezal two hours, then called in O'Donnell, County Detective Harry Brown and Deputy Jack Gillespie.

Dolezal later led authorities to a third spot where he said he disposed of the missing skull of Mrs. Florence Polillo, 42, No. 3 in the torso slayings.

Dolezal, who told in a signed confession of killing Mrs. Polillo four years ago and dismembering her body, previously asserted that he threw the skull in Lake Erie. Then he said he buried it in the Kingsbury Run sector. Excavators failed to locate it.

The spot pointed out tonight is covered with water backed up by recent street improvements.

O'Donnell said concerning the skull's location:

"When we learn that to our satisfaction, we will have enough of a case to present to the county prosecutors."

Treasury Refuses To Follow Falling Silver Prices

By the Associated Press.

The United States outbid London's private speculators for silver yesterday in an attempt to halt the erratic decline in the world price of the metal.

Although cutting its price from 36.75 cents per ounce to 35 cents, the Treasury declined to follow the London market as it has for the last two weeks. In London, silver went down to an eight-year low of 33.84 cents.

The price of silver in London has fallen steadily from 43 cents an ounce ever since the Senate voted on June 26 to stop further purchases of foreign silver. During this period, the United States Treasury has been cutting its price to about the London market level to prevent dumping of the metal here.

Although the proposed ban was removed from the monetary bill last week, the Treasury continued to follow the London price until yesterday.

Navy Guns Boom Swanson Requiem

a special train for Richmond.

The caisson, drawn by seven white horses, escorted by sailors and marines, and followed by the President, the Cabinet, the Diplomatic Corps, Supreme Court justices, and Congressmen, drew the body from the Senate, where it had lain in State while the Navy said goodby with the roar of 19-minute guns.

The Navy, that lost its Secretary in the sudden death of Swanson Friday at the Rapidan Camp in Virginia, spinshed the brief funeral proceedings here with color and the overtones of mourning. It guarded him in death in the Senate chamber and walked with him in a long procession in funeral steps to the slow beat of funeral drums. It sounded taps for him at the station and sent his body away with music.

Urged Big Navy

The body of Swanson, who was one of America's chief advocates of a strong Navy, was brought before noon to the Senate chamber and placed in front of a wall of flowers. The galleries filled rapidly. Several times the guard, a sailor and a marine, posted at each end of the casket, were changed by Marine Capt. F. H. Williams.

The services, conducted by the Chaplains of the House and Senate, began immediately upon the arrival of the President. Before he came the family had taken their seats to the right of the casket. Mrs. Swanson's face was veiled.

Out on the floor, the face of Carter Glass, who came up with Swanson through the earlier, gone political melees of Virginia, was in sorrow and his eyes fixed on the casket.

The high commanders in the Navy were on the floor by the casket or scattered through the balconies. Supreme Court Justices McReynolds and Black came in together and sat two rows back from the casket. The Cabinet, in formal attire, was on the President's left. The galleries were packed.

"Lead Kindly Light"

The rituals were intoned by the black-gowned chaplains across the room where Swanson had represented his State for 25 years before going, in 1936, to the Cabinet. From in front, near the flowers, Miss Marjorie Stringfellow sang "Abide With Me," and "Lead, Kindly Light." Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British Ambassador, his tall body tremendous in the chair, glued his eyes on the singer. A Japanese notable looked off, distantly.

The crowd was kept beyond the Capitol's east steps by police and the roped-off sidewalk. Two battalions of Marines and sailors, in blue-and-white uniforms, stretched the length of the Capitol's east front. Crowds were on the Capitol steps and necks craned from the windows.

The flowers were brought out and placed in a Navy truck, filling the inside and reaching to the heads of the half dozen sailors who manned it. The truck moved away toward the Union Station. The sailors and Marines were at present arms and the flags were dipped by the color guard.

Minute Guns Boom

The honorary pallbearers came down the steps and turned so that the casket could pass between them. The Navy Band played "Lead Kindly Light" as the casket was lifted atop the caisson. The Marines and sailors marched into Delaware avenue, timing their steps to the funeral drums and music. During the march, the firing of the 19 minute-guns down at the Navy Yard began.

All of the route on the short avenue to the station was filled with people. They waited in the shade by the curbsides and removed their hats as the caisson went past. The crowd that had waited on the east side of the Capitol thronged into the avenue to watch the procession pass. The procession moved so slowly to the slow beating drums that many in the crowd, who had waited until the long procession moved, reached the station ahead of the caisson.

The Marines and sailors lined on the east side of the Union Station, but facing west. The band played a hymn there and Corpl. Robert P. Jackson, U. S. M. C., sounded "Taps." The bluejackets fired three volleys.

The Senate voted unanimously, on motion of Senator Barkley, majority leader, to adjourn until noon today "as a further mark of respect to the late Secretary." Condolences came from various quarters.

Many Send Condolences

Vice Admiral Koshiro Oikawa, commander in chief of Japanese China fleet in Chinese waters, forwarded through Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, U. S. N., commander in chief, Asiatic Fleet, the following message:

"Deep condolences for the very great loss which the United States Government and Navy has suffered in the death of Mr. Claude Swanson, the Secretary of the Navy."

Today's Decision

Senate opponents of the Administration's neutrality bill are divided as to the advisability of keeping that measure from the floor. Some, knowing their strength to be proportionately greater in the Foreign Relations Committee, desire to pigeonhole the legislation. Others believe that they can strengthen their position before the country in open debate.

Whatever the individual opinion on the subject it is clear that the only democratic, and therefore the only honorable, course is to report the measure out and give it the benefit of clarifying debate. No other issue now before the country is of greater underlying importance, and none is more widely misunderstood. It would be the negation of the American form of government if a minority should seek to shut off discussion on a matter so intimately affecting the national destiny.

Much the same must be said of the suggested compromise whereby no action on neutrality would be taken now, but it would be put first on the list when Congress reconvenes. Time and tide do not wait on the feelings of fatigued legislators. And Senator Barkley is certainly not guilty of exaggeration when he tells his colleagues that "there are a lot of things more important than adjourning."

Even at the risk of a filibuster, friends and foes of the neutrality bill should agree on prompt, open and comprehensive consideration of that measure. Any who argue otherwise are tacitly admitting that they fear to confront a vital responsibility. And it is one which will lose none of its magnitude by a pusillanimous endeavor to dodge the issue.

Political Pawn?

Reports that President Roosevelt intends to appoint Paul V. McNutt as head of the new Federal Security Agency are somewhat baffling. Mr. McNutt has exhibited unquestionable executive skill as Governor of Indiana and lately as high commissioner for the United States in the Philippines. But he has never been particularly identified with the social security movement, and it can scarcely be said that he has indicated any striking aptitude for this post.

On the other hand, Mr. McNutt is an avowed candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination next year. Only last week he told newspapermen that he has no idea of abandoning his efforts to secure the nomination, and yesterday, on leaving the White House, he reiterated that ambition. It is impossible to think of a more inappropriate place than the headquarters of the Federal Security Agency as a base for a Presidential campaign.

This new governmental unit, created by President Roosevelt under the Reorganization Act, includes the Social Security Board, the Civilian Conservation Corps, the United States Employment Service, the National Youth Administration, the Office of Education and the United States Public Health Service. Every one of these units ought to be as far removed as possible from political influences. It is doubtful whether there is any other position in the Government service calling for a higher degree of objectivity, technical training and freedom from partisanship than does the post for which Mr. McNutt is said to be slated.

In these circumstances such an appointment is likely to be regarded as an adroit political maneuver. It will be asked if the President hopes to silence a formidable contender for the 1940 Democratic nomination by appointing Mr. McNutt to a position in which he will be expected to drop all political activity. That is likely to be the general conclusion if the social security system is placed under the direction of this aspiring "favorite son."

No doubt Mr. McNutt will be delighted with the arrangement, if it is made. A high post in Washington can be readily interpreted by his supporters as giving his political aspirations a sort of Presidential blessing. And Mr. McNutt is not the type of candidate who may be expected to let official responsibility choke off his burning message to the American people.

Is it possible, under these circumstances, that the President will use the new position of Federal Security Administrator as a political pawn?

The Central Issue

The House sub-committee on reorganization of the District government will today be confronted by a lengthy bill over which many points of disagreement have arisen. It may easily become lost in the arguments for and against specific provisions and therefore take no action. Or it may consider the merits of the bill as a whole, and, after making such changes as seem desirable, speed the measure toward enactment.

In reforming a governmental system it is never possible to please everyone. Already Representative Kennedy, Commissioner Allen and the Griffenhagen experts who directed the original survey have brought about extensive changes in the bill to minimize the controversy surrounding it. Some members of Congress think these amendments have gone too far. Others believe they have not gone far enough. But these individual differences over details of the bill are all beside the point.

The real question is whether this plan, worked out with a great deal of study and discussion, would give the District a better government. On that point there is little room for controversy. Washington is now governed by a strange conglomeration of agencies, Federal and local, which is conducive to neither efficiency nor economy nor local control. Whatever may be the defects of the Kennedy bill, as it applies to specific agencies, it would create a unified municipal government that would be far more amenable to the community than is the present hodge-podge government.

The bill is designed to give the District all the powers ordinarily exercised by a municipal corporation. In addition to a long list of enumerated powers, it would confer upon the District all the authority "that may be reasonably necessary and proper for the government and regulation of its inhabitants and its local affairs and for the rendering of local public service, not inconsistent with law, to the end that a complete, harmonious, and effective municipal government may be maintained and operated, and thereby the rights, interests, safety, morals, health, comfort, education, convenience, and general welfare of the District and its inhabitants may be promoted and safeguarded."

From the viewpoint of the District, that would be the greatest advance since the abolition of the so-called Territorial government in 1874. From the viewpoint of Congress, a great source of annoyance would be eliminated. The extent of that annoyance may possibly be measured by the refusal of the House yesterday to consider District legislation. Under this bill Congress would still retain complete authority over the District, just as States do over their cities. But that body would be saved from the necessity of passing formal acts through both houses to direct the routine functions of a municipal government.

If the bill is enacted, no doubt it will have to be amended many times in the future. But that is no argument against its acceptance now. The constructive aspects so far outweigh the possible shortcomings that the sub-committee can make no mistake by giving it the green light.

Havelock Ellis

Queen Victoria was still on the throne, and Washingtonians who admit themselves middle-aged were sucking their thumbs, when Havelock Ellis wrote "The Evolution of Modesty," the first volume in his world-famous series of "Studies in the Psychology of Sex."

Since then the concept of modesty has evolved by leaps and bounds, far outstripping—the word is used advisedly—any intention to be shocking which Mr. Ellis may have harbored forty years ago. Here, as elsewhere in charting the trembling quicksand of sex relations, this great English psychologist suffered the all but inevitable penalty of the pioneer. The thousands who flocked along the trail he blazed have by their very numbers tended to obscure the value of his achievement.

If there is a generally healthier attitude toward sex than was the case in the days of prunes and prisms it is in no small measure due to the research and writings of Havelock Ellis. And to say this is not to disparage the work of the Vienna school. Freud and Jung are doubtless more scientific in their approach, more technically scholars in the handling of material. But none of the professedly professional psychoanalysts has ever approached Ellis as writer and expositor; none can compare with him as an artist.

It is, indeed, as an artist that the fame of Havelock Ellis would seem most secure. The psychology of sex, one feels, is a tricky and elusive field of study. Future inquiry may show that much now accepted on the subject is so much hooey. Continued investigation may confirm the suspicion that neither man nor woman will ever be able to tabulate to his or her advantage all that is to be known in the many facets of their relationships.

But the investigator whose pen is touched with beauty will always be remembered gratefully, even though time may prove his learning partial and his conclusions ill-founded. Thus the name of Havelock Ellis will endure as essayist regardless of his fate as psychologist. The pity is that the proportion of his writing with no explicit message—no desire to dogmatize—is as small as it is precious to those who value literary craftsmanship.

Der Tag

For a good many tens of thousands of earnest souls this is a momentous day. Before evening it will be known whether the best the eight National League teams can assemble in the way of ballplayers this year are a match for their most eminent colleagues of the American League—or that is the idea, anyhow.

There is reason to suppose that this annual "dream game" is taken much more seriously by the fans than by the managers and players of the respective leagues. The latter know that today's contest is not as important professionally as the day-by-day showing, or as participation in a world's series. Besides, they are well aware that a single ball game proves nothing one way or another.

So far there have been six of these All-Star games. The American League has won four, the National League two. Does this prove that the one is twice as good as the other? There are many, including some sportswriters with considerable opportunity for observation, who do believe that the general quality of baseball in the American League is vastly superior. But the history of these "dream games" is hardly conclusive evidence.

A better case could be advanced from the world series records. Thirty-five world series have been played, enough for the factors of chance to have pretty well canceled out. American League champions have won 22 times, National League champions 13 times. On the other hand, up to and including 1922 the American League had won 57 world series games to 54 won by National League clubs, close enough to show that during this period there was not a great deal to choose between the leagues in the matter of aggregate skill.

It is since 1922 that the American League has really forged ahead in championships. Its advance coincides with the rise of the new free-hitting style of baseball, which has shifted the preponderant advantage from pitcher to batter and thereby greatly altered the whole strategy of the game. The new style has of course influenced all baseball, professional and otherwise, but it seems to have reached its highest development in the American League.

All this brings us back to that "dream game" with which the infatuate fan occupies his disordered fancy but which, alas, will never actually be played. Could a team composed of pre-Ruth heroes, including, say, Alexander, Johnson, Bresnahan, Chase, Lajoie, Wagner, Jimmy Collins, Speaker, Cobb and Sisler in their prime, beat one that included at their best Ruth, DiMaggio, Simmons, Dykes, Lazzeri, Crossetti, Gehrig, Dickey and such pitchers as might be needed? It is an idle speculation. But in a world which has just seen the imperious Yankees drop five straight to Boston no speculation can be considered out of place.

President Of The F. P. A.

Since it came into being 20 years ago, the Foreign Policy Association has been singularly fortunate in its leadership.

First under James G. McDonald, and more recently under Raymond Leslie Buell, the organization has consistently stressed objectivity, factual information and political understanding. By disseminating impartial and authoritative background information on international affairs it has helped to create the well-informed public opinion without which a democracy cannot maintain effective diplomacy. And, in view of what is happening in the world today, there is a greater need of this service than ever before.

The F.P.A. is to be congratulated, therefore, in having secured as the successor to Dr. Buell, who resigned as president on July 1, a man of such outstanding ability and reputation as Maj. Gen. Frank Ross McCoy, retired. A distinguished Army officer, Gen. McCoy has had exceptionally wide experience as a soldier-diplomat.

He helped to direct the fiscal and budgetary affairs of Cuba when still a recent West Point graduate. He was a member of the Wood-Forbes commission which in 1921 reviewed Philippine-American relations. He supervised the Nicaraguan elections preliminary to the withdrawal of American Marines and performed that task, as all others which have fallen to his lot, with tact and understanding. He served as chairman of the commission which investigated the Chaco dispute in 1929. He was the American member of the Lytton Commission, sent to Manchuria by the League of Nations in 1932.

Gen. McCoy brings to his new task, by no means the least important of the many he has undertaken, great prestige, unusual administrative skill, a fine personality and a high degree of technical knowledge in the international field. His interest in the the F.P.A. is a compliment to that body. Its faith in him is a further distinction for Gen. McCoy.

You've got plenty to worry about when your physician examines you and tells you to take things easy and not worry about anything.

Letters To The Editor

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

H. R. 960

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Within the next few days, H. R. 960 is expected to be placed before the House of Representatives for discussion and vote, following a favorable report by the House Civil Service Committee and the granting of a special rule by the Rules Committee.

H. R. 960, introduced by Representative Robert Ramspeck, of Georgia, is sponsored by the National Federation of Federal Employes and has the backing of virtually all organizations concerned in the cause of good government.

Briefly, the bill provides for the broad extension of the competitive classified service of the Federal Government. Its passage, we believe, would give the greatest impetus to the merit system since the original Pendleton act was put on the statute books more than 50 years ago, and it would improve and modernize in many ways personnel administration in the Federal service.

As you know, passage of a measure such as this is long overdue. Now the time and the opportunity for decisive action are at hand.

LUTHER C. STEWARD,
President, the National Federation of Federal Employes.

No First Term?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There has been made the same statement by two very prominent persons—a Senator and our Solicitor General—that President Roosevelt did not have a first term, because the Supreme Court found some of the measures he had sponsored to be contrary to our Constitution.

Had this happened in private corporations the heads of such corporations would have been removed and would have been subject to conviction in addition to being liable to the stockholders of such corporation for all moneys spent under those conditions.

And such men are naive enough to believe that John Q. Public will swallow hook, line and sinker and elect him for a third term.

I say let him run on that part of his record, and Virginia again will go into the Republican column.

Asks Co-operation Against Japan

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To the Western nations, as well as to the future peace and progress of the world, the Far Eastern situation offers but two alternatives. The first is to continue the policy of drift which has been followed so far—the policy of nominal disapproval while at the same time giving positive aid to Japan's program of imperialist aggression.

In 1938 the United States supplied Japan with 56 per cent of all her vital war materials, while the United States, Great Britain and the Netherlands supplied 85 per cent of the total. For every dollar we have received from such goods we have already expended more than three dollars to protect ourselves from the military juggernaut we have helped to create.

What will be the consequences of this policy of drift and continued aid to Japan? Japan will eliminate all foreign interests from China, thus gaining a free hand. She will, still with our help, eventually subjugate all but the innermost provinces of China, and will at the same time be building up a vast, modern industrial machine, fed with resources obtained by seizure, not paid for as we must pay, and operated by slave labor receiving no more than ten cents per day.

As this new industrial machine gets into full operation Japan will be able to dominate the markets of the world with her low-priced goods, against which, with our wage and labor standards, it will be impossible for us successfully to compete.

Where Japan dominates other countries may trade only so long as it is advantageous to Japan. With control of China consolidated the next steps will be the conquest of Indo-China, Malaysia, the Netherlands Indies, the Philippines, and even Australia. For the sake of immediate profits we are hastening the day when we shall be completely cut off from our present markets in the Far East and the Pacific. Our trade with this area in 1937 was almost exactly double our total trade with all of South America.

Thus with Japan in control of all East Asia and the Pacific even further conquest will be the logical expectation. It is their avowed intention.

Japan's policy involves measures to insure no resurgence of strength within the people subjugated. Proof of this lies in the destruction of the schools, hospitals, and all cultural institutions in the parts of China they control, as well as in the parts they have been able to bomb, but do not yet control.

This is only the Far Eastern side of the picture. At the same time Germany and Italy, in close co-operation with Japan, will be spreading the black plague of fascism throughout Europe, the Near East, Africa, and even in the Western Hemisphere, as their strength and power increases. Can anyone say that all this is no concern of ours?

The other alternative can be stated briefly. The countries interested in the future of peace and fair dealing among nations must cooperate. Those interested in the cause of liberty and freedom must be as aggressive and uncompromising in the furtherance of their cause as are the dictators.

Great Britain and France should, at the earliest possible moment, consummate an alliance with Russia. Great Britain, the Netherlands and the United States should immediately embargo the shipment of all war materials to Japan. These materials are vital to Japan's military program. She could not long continue without them. This move would not only slow down and soon stop Japan's advance, but it would so weaken the strategically effective three-cornered alliance of Japan, Germany and Italy that their war-making power would be practically nullified.

The Western powers should then give encouragement and aid to enlightened, progressive China, which would be a friendly China, to enable them to build up their national strength to the point where they could drive out the invaders, and thus build up and maintain a balance of power in the Orient which would automatically keep Japanese imperialistic ambitions in check. Extraterritoriality and other special rights would then be an outworn thing of the past. Trade would be open to all nations equally.

Federal Relief

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Now that a strike is on with the WPA workers because they are required to work 130 hours per month to hold their jobs, it might be a good time for the American people to take some thought as to why the Federal Government is in business of hiring and firing laborers who should be in the employ of industrial plants.

What has this so-called relief program worked itself into anyway? Does it intend to make serfs out of good American men and women? All that is offered by the Federal Government in its new departure from the ideals of America is relief, which, as it is operated, means the breaking up of regular industrial labor of our country, which has built up our country to a high standard of greatness, such as is not known in any other nation.

And if it is relief, only the actual needy are supposed to be supplied, according to their daily needs. Why produce a condition in this great wealthy Nation of America where workers that should be gainfully employed are put on the Federal Government pay rolls?

The whole thing is wrong, and never should have been started, and it should be seen by now, with something like 20,000,000 on relief, almost one-sixth of our country's population, that something other than just relief is trailing this movement. How can our industrialists be expected to expand their list of employes, with the Federal Government having this vast army of men and women at its command to work such hours as it shall state, and receive such wages as it wants to pay?

It is not relief, but sinister forces which are earnestly and energetically working to change American ideals, and bring in a new order of things. If this is not so, why the great array of alphabetical bureaus, and their administrators in our Federal Government? Let us awake and consider before we become a bankrupt Nation, as did Germany when a basketful of the old German marks would not buy a loaf of bread. D. PAUL ZIEGLER.

Upheaval

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The papers tell me "Mr. Guffey said" that the American people are getting sick and tired of political machines and politicians' wire pulling.

He also said if the President did not get a third term to look for an upheaval. I think it would be a wonderful thing for our country, if we did have an upheaval, which would sweep away some of our politicians.

But it will never sweep away big business. It will make some of the big business stronger in a better way. CLARENCE DUNLAP.
Philadelphia, Pa., July 5.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Not the least impressive part of Senator Guffey's recent speech in defense of hand-out humanitarianism, continued unemployment, and other natural outgrowths of the New Deal way, was his humorous reference to New Deal "gains."

But in justice to the Senator other New Deal speakers have this same tendency to misuse the American language. G. A. FARSON.

The Post Impressionist

The Rescue

WHENEVER anyone refers to the portrait of Washington which Dolly Madison carted, for all its size, out of the burning White House, I think of another large painting which was not the subject of a rescue—but took a rescue for its subject.

It hung in the granite castle of one of those Middle Western families which acquired quick riches—from plows or carriages or best-quality seeds, it doesn't matter—during the '80's and '90's. Booth Tarkington has imbedded just such a family in the amber of his "Magnificent Ambersons."

The clan was ruled by a matriarch who gave promise, even in her rosy young matronhood, of the authority she would one day assume. She was still youthful, though the mother of six, when the family moved into its fortress on a knoll overlooking the best section of town.

The family was scarcely settled and the four oldest children shipped off to a highly recommended boarding school when, late one night, fire broke out in the castle. It didn't do serious damage, but there was a lot of smoke. This smoke awakened the young matron and sent her hurrying to the nursery on the top floor. There she thrust a sleepy child under each arm, and in good order made her way down and out of the building. In no time, firemen suppressed the impertinent small blaze.

The more the Hoosier mother of the Gracchi considered her act the more she came to feel such quick thinking, indeed such heroism, should be commemorated—as an example to the children, if nothing more. Not two months later, then, she commissioned a journeyman painter to render the subject appropriately, on a canvas big enough to do it justice, say 10 feet by 12 feet.

Given such an expanse, the painter's enthusiasm knew no bounds. He chose to immortalize the moment when the brave woman emerged from the burning structure. In every detail, the granite castle loomed high, horrid flames leaping from every window, smoke billowing into the night sky. In the foreground, her head high, her long black hair floating in the desperate wind, stood his patron. Despite the breeze, her nightgown hung in sculptural folds. The ruffles at the high neck and wrists of the garment were crisp and immaculate; the beautifully embroidered yoke was pictured in such detail the ladies of the community could have used it for a pattern. That stylish yoke was not obscured in any part by the child she clutched to her breast. He seemed, in fact, unaware of any disturbance, and slept angelically in his mother's arms. The little girl was as neatly assembled as her mama in a gown that was a small replica of the matron's. There they stood, a touching group, while firemen in the background scaled ladders to the tessalated tower, and maidservants in impressive numbers leaped from the windows in the servants' wing.

In its heavy gilt frame, the painting was swung into place on the wall at the head of the main stairway. There it impressed the children during vacations, all except the youngest boy, the sleeping child in the painting. He was away at school and then in Europe and finally settled in an Eastern city. The Rescue quite faded from his mind.

He had developed into a man of considerable taste if not as much money as he had once expected. From 1915 on, the family fortunes declined. What money the founder left was, among his relict and six children, cut into too many slices for any one to be oversize. Still and all, the man of taste managed to live comfortably in a spacious, low-ceilinged house designed to display his collection of modern paintings. These he had judiciously picked up before the artists who painted them had begun to enjoy a vogue. If the worst ever arrived, he would sell them one by one, all but his treasured little Renoir: a luminous family group, the mother dark and sweet, the children possessed of that almost transparent skin only Renoir could put to canvas.

He would never have had a chance to buy it had he been within hearing of his mother's voice at the time. But he was far away, the only one of her children to whom she could not dictate. The rest married and invested and entertained as she commanded.

She died just before the depression reduced to a splinter what money the family still had. Had she lived a little longer, she might have left the castle to the children—to realize what they could from its stones. Instead, it went to the town for a library, and her children received little more than her personal possessions.

To the oldest boy, who was almost pathologically shy and considered therefore a recluse and a scholar, went the Emerson first editions. To the only daughter, the diamonds in their old-fashioned settings. To each of the others, that which seemed to the matriarch to suit him best. So, of course, the man of taste, who bought paintings with his money, received The Rescue. Besides, he was in it. That settled the question for the old lady. She never thought of the daughter, a life-long practice with her.

When the connoisseur received his legacy, he went out and got drunk. When he sobered up he realized that he had no wall, fortunately, big enough for the canvas and the frame. He could have had the thing mounted sidewise, as a mural, but he preferred to think that impractical. So he offered it to the town fathers. They were discouragingly apathetic, but he hoped one day they might act. He still does.

Until then, he has stored the painting in his garage where he keeps it turned face to the wall. But the handy man around his place has a mania for turning the picture face out. Its oleograph colors apparently fascinate him. Often, the man of taste has come home of an evening, feeling mellow and at peace with the sleeping world. Then, without warning, as he turns into his garage, his headlights pick out the leaping flames, the heroic group lying rigidly on one side. At such times, he wishes grimly that he had never been rescued. AUDREY WALZ.

Eyes Turned On Roosevelt

By Mark Sullivan

Friends, Foes Watch

MEN WATCH President Roosevelt for a sign. Will he, won't he run again? They weigh each word he utters, turn it over and look at the back of it, and the edges of it. Like poker-players observing an opponent's expression, they watch a droop of Mr. Roosevelt's eyelid, or an upward move of the corner of his mouth. Did that mean he will? Did it mean he won't? Seriously they argue about it.

Friends watch and opponents watch—those who want him to, and those who don't want him to. Those whose own political fortunes would be affected, Senators and Representatives who are themselves up for renomination next year. Those who, for prudence or on good faith, want to be with him if he is going to run; but want to make early attachment to someone else in case Mr. Roosevelt does not run. All watch.

Newspapermen watch. When a caller comes out the White House door, the newspapermen pounce upon him. Did the President give any sign? Did he say anything about it at all? Did you bring the subject up? How did he act?

They watch the President's actions about ordinary matters—to find his state of mind on the great matter. He asked Democratic Senator Vic Donahey of Ohio to run for re-election next year, though Mr. Donahey had announced he would not. That means he wants the Democrats to have a good vote-getting candidate for Senator in Ohio. That means he wants the Democrats to carry Ohio. But what is its bearing on the big question? Does it mean he expects to be himself the Democratic candidate for President?

Neutrality Bill May Be A Sign

THEY WATCH. They discuss and they argue. Yet they get nowhere. Like Omar, always they come out the same door they went in.

Yet there is a sign, a sign of his state of mind. It may be of his conscious mind or of his unconscious, but in either case, a sign. To see it, follow the neutrality bill now before Congress.

Mr. Roosevelt wants the neutrality bill passed, in its original form. Very earnestly he wants it. Almost he pleads for it. He wants it because it will enable him to continue a foreign policy he has followed.

In the House, an amendment was introduced, changing the bill materially, practically reversing it. This amendment, opposed to the President's policy, was adopted by a very narrow majority, 180 to 187, a majority of 2.

Now anybody who reads the debates and is familiar with the Washington scene can readily see the motive actuating some of those who voted to change the bill. It is not so much that they oppose the policy as a policy. It is rather that they oppose the way Mr. Roosevelt follows the policy. They think Mr. Roosevelt has been a little headlong in pursuit of the policy, and generally a little incautious in his actions and utterances about foreign relations.

This feeling held by some, whether justly or unjustly, Mr. Roosevelt could end. He could do it by announcing that at the end of his term of office, 18 months from now, he will retire. He could readily recapture more than the two votes by which he lost his neutrality measure in the House. If Mr. Roosevelt values his neutrality bill more than he values preservation of his chance to run again, he could probably get his neutrality bill.

Announcement Would Clarify Situation

IN THE SENATE is a similar situation. There are two Democratic Senators in a key position—if they favor the bill they could increase its chance of passing. These two Senators happen to be ones whom Mr. Roosevelt last year attempted to "purge." It would not be unreasonable if they, by their experience, acquired some apprehension that Mr. Roosevelt is a man who is sometimes imprudent in his attempts to use power. Put it, if you will, that they may harbor resentment. In either event, Mr. Roosevelt could disarm them by announcing he will not run again. Such announcement would clarify not only the neutrality situation but everything else.

What is said here was said two years ago, in June, 1937, by a commentator friendly to the Administration, Mr. Raymond Clapper, wise about politics:

"One of the best things Roosevelt could do for himself and the country would be to take note of recurring third-term speculation and end it, definitely, flatly, finally, once and for all . . . Instead of losing prestige and influence by sawing himself off from the possibility of a third term, Roosevelt would strengthen public confidence in his purpose to keep this a democratic Nation. It is infinitely more harmful to Roosevelt to permit such talk to continue and to corrupt affairs at Washington than it would be to knock it off dead . . . Unless he removes himself from this situation, it will spread its fatal corrosion over the remainder of his Administration."

In Mr. Roosevelt's silence about a third term lies a sign of his estate of mind about it.

Today And Tomorrow

Columnist Believes Some Misunderstanding May Cause War

(Walter Lippmann, who returned yesterday from a trip to Great Britain and France, has written the following special article on the European situation. Mr. Lippmann's regular column will be resumed later.)

By Walter Lippmann.

NO PREDICTION about Europe is possible at this time because no one knows which coalition is the stronger, because every one realizes that neither side has anything like a decisive superiority. The axis does not now have the power to impose its will. But the alliance does not as yet have the power to compel the axis to renounce its ambitions.

The alliance has enough force to make another aggression very dangerous, but not enough force to make aggression so obviously and absolutely dangerous that it cannot be attempted.

The situation has reached a point where the axis can probably not make another important conquest without provoking a general war. But it has not reached a point where it is clear to all that the axis could not win a general war.

So it may be said that, if he proceeds, Hitler faces the risk of war. But it is not yet clear that he faces also the risk of defeat.

The coalition against him is now too strong to be intimidated. It is not yet strong enough to be invincible. Consequently, the issue of peace and war hangs upon the complex speculation and intuition of one man.

There is no predicting the outcome because we know neither the truth about which side is the stronger, nor can we know what Hitler will think is the truth.

A Misunderstanding May Bring War

THIS IS A mad world. But there is some method in the madness, and it may be said, I think that if there is a general war in Europe in the near future, it will be the result of a misunderstanding, a miscalculation, or a calculated act of desperation. 1939 is not 1938.

Last year Hitler knew at first hand that provided the French guaranty could be canceled because the Czecho-Slovaks could be made to yield without fighting, he could have what he wanted without the risk of a great war.

The British and French were neither able nor willing to risk a war; they lacked arms, allies and conviction; they were internally divided. So their real policy, as Hitler knew from excellent sources, was to soften the Czechs and to make British and French opinion non-resistant.

Look Upon Poland As Needed Ally

THIS IS NOT the position today. It is certain, I think, that the British and French look upon Poland, not as a small nation to which they owe a moral obligation, but as an indispensable ally in the protection of their own position in Europe and in the world. Rightly or wrongly, British and French conservatives last year regarded Czecho-Slovakia as a dangerous commitment. With very few open dissenters, these same conservatives today regard Poland as a military asset of the very first importance.

This view rests on no exaggerated estimate of what the Polish army could do but on the realization that without Poland resisting somewhere in Eastern Europe, there can be no Eastern front, and therefore, no blockade.

If Poland falls, there will fall, too, the Baltic states, Hungary, Yugoslavia, Rumania, Greece. After that anything can happen, as between Russia and Germany, and the whole power of Germany would be available for a campaign of intimidation or even of attack against France and England.

Therefore, in 1939, London and Paris wish to stiffen the Poles, not to soften them as they did the Czechs. And their immediate concern is to convince Hitler that they are not bluffing. For if he thinks they are bluffing, then his misunderstanding of the Anglo-French policy may cost the world a great war.

Hitler May Depend On Quick Attack

WAR MIGHT come also as a result of any one of several miscalculations. Hitler might think that he can crush Poland in a lightning war, say in six weeks, and that he can then negotiate a peace before the democracies could make effective the blockade or consummate the offensive through Italy against the German flank.

Hitler would be speculating on the possibility that a sufficiently savage attack on Poland and on London and Paris would demoralize the British and French peoples, especially if they were convinced that the United States would refuse to let them buy arms because the American people did not care what happened to the Western democracies.

Such a calculation would certainly increase the chances of war. We must regard this as a miscalculation because unless all the signs are misleading, once a war is unleashed, it will not end until one side or the other is decisively beaten.

Another possible miscalculation would be to assume that the resistance in eastern Europe, particularly in Poland, can be dissolved by internal intrigue and propaganda, and by a progressive demoralization resulting from prolonged humiliation and from the tension of remaining passive. There is no evidence as yet that such a campaign would work. But it might work if it lasts long enough. On the other hand, it might have just the opposite effect, that is to say, it might provoke an explosion.

Anglo-French Bloc Becoming Stronger

IT IS NECESSARY also to take into account the possibility of a war launched as an act of desperation. There is no doubt, I think, that the Anglo-French coalition is becoming progressively stronger than the axis. Germany and Italy are using their reserves of material and men.

Except in the training of officers and soldiers, time is against them. In the air they still may have some superiority. They no longer have supremacy, and in the end they are bound to lose the race of armaments. The internal morale in Italy, in Austria, in Bohemia is deteriorating; according to the best information, it is certainly not improving in Germany.

It is possible that Hitler and Mussolini may feel that it is now or never, that the risks of war are less terrifying than the risks of a frustrated peace.

It is also possible that they may realize that the terrorization of Europe has already produced such a reaction that in the end several nations may turn from the passive defensive to the offensive.

Nothing, in short, is clear, and it would be very misleading to report that there is anything now in sight except tension and crisis for the weeks, for the months, that lie ahead.

Life's Darkest Moment

Congress Faces WPA Pay Battle

ized to stop work for one day in a demonstration against the new act. An order issued in New York, according to the Associated Press, suggested the work stoppages be conducted in co-operation with the A. F. of L. and the Workers' Alliance. The union estimated it has 3,000 workers employed by the WPA though none are on relief work in the Capital.

David Lasser, president of the Alliance, said he was polling the executive committee on calling a nation-wide protest demonstration for July 20.

New York WPA Administrator Col. B. B. Somervell warned that any persons who threaten or intimidate WPA workers would be prosecuted.

Little chance was given the House prevailing-wage bills, as in the normal course of events they will go to the conservative Appropriations Committee. Chairman of this committee, Representative Taylor, of Colorado, yesterday said he thought his group "would not reverse its stand" on necessity of abolishing prevailing wage provisions of the old law.

Meanwhile, organized labor intensified its belated struggle to regain the prevailing wage, as William Green, president of the A. F. L. warned that failure of Congress to revise the law would mean "strikes and strikes."

Addressing a longshoremen's convention in New York, Green said the A. F. L. would use all of its economic strength to impress its views on Congress. A special conference of A. F. L. leaders will be held in Washington tomorrow to discuss the situation.

100,000 Face Lockout

Support for restoration of the prevailing wage was reiterated yesterday by the C. I. O., whose unemployment director, Ralph Hetzel, jr., said the Murray amendment "is the proper way to settle the WPA wage questino." Hetzel placed special emphasis, however, on the provision forbidding reduction in the total monthly wage.

Local 1, United Federal Workers, a C. I. O. affiliate, held a mass meeting here yesterday to demnad revision of the relief regulations and to protest the dismissal of 280 local WPA administrative employees dropped as part of the general reduction in WPA staff.

Despite the protest from labor unions and their Congressional advocates, Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA Administrator, stood firm on the long-standing rule that WPA workers who are absent from their jobs for five consecutive days shall be dismissed. Under this provision, an estimated 100,000 strikers are threatened with removal from the WPA payroll this week.

Back-to-Work Move Gains

However, a back-to-work movement among strikers was reported from some sections of the country yesterday. In Cleveland, a majority of the 12,000 who joined the walkout returned to work, the Associated Press said. WPA officials in New England said many strikers were back, and in New York City Col. Somervell, WPA administrator, declared work was proceeding on all projects.

Under the new regulations, originally proposed by Col. Harrington and incorporated into the 1940 relief act that took effect July 1, persons on WPA must work 130 hours a month for the monthly security wage. The old law set no minimum working time but provided that prevailing wages must be paid so that some skilled workers had to work only 40 or 50 hours a month to earn their monthly security wages.

Eight Back Murray

In addition to restoring the prevailing wage and retaining the present monthly pay schedule, Senator Murray's bill includes the provision of current law that wage differentials throughout the country shall be no greater than justified by differences in the cost of living.

The Montana New Dealer said his proposal was indorsed by Senators Wagner and Mead, of New York; Schwellenbach, of Washington; Neely, of West Virginia; Guffey, of Pennsylvania; Downey, of California; Donahey, of Ohio; McCarran, of Nevada.

Representative Hook (Democrat), of Michigan, a regular member of the House liberal bloc, said he favored prevailing wages but he felt the A. F. L. should have agreed to a reduction in the rate of WPA workers. "It's too much to pay $3 an hour for relief work," he commented.

On the other hand, Representative Sabath asserted that the new provisions brought wages "not only below the average union labor pay for trades, but below prevailing wages in private employment in a major portion of the country."

Mockery Material

IN A SHRILL cry of alarm at the proposal to abolish the income tax exemption of public securities, Mayor LaGuardia, speaking this time as a businessman of large affairs, protested that this change would disrupt the whole financial arrangement of many cities, increase interest rate and destroy the credit of some municipalities. There is much in what he says on this subject, but there is material for mockery in the fact that a New Deal mayor here voiced the identical complaint that businessmen have offered against measures which have enjoyed his honor's enthusiastic approval.

The complaint of business has been that increased tax rates, social security, the wage and hours law and the increase in operating costs imposed by unions under the the Wagner act have, in effect, changed the rules of the game and in many cases disrupted in fact, grievously impaired, their financial arrangements. The metaphor used to describe their problem held that the Government started out dealing straight poker but declared the deuces wild on skinning its own hand and discovering four two-spots there.

As in the case of the municipalities whose arrangements are now threatened with embarrassment, firms had undertaken binding financial obligations. There were commitments for interest and the retirement of borrowings all written down on paper and subject to no excuse or kindness of heart. Other responsibilities had been taken into consideration and balanced in the formulation of plans extending far into the future.

No Sympathy Then Shown For Business

WHEN SUCH plans were suddenly thrown entirely out of plumb by Federal and State enactments and union demands enforced by Government blackjack, neither Mr. LaGuardia nor any other aggressive kiver-to-kiver New Dealer expressed any sympathy for the problems of business firms which employ help and pay wages, and the uniform answer to business protests was a harsh and cynical, "throw the bum out; he is breaking my heart."

The financing and operating plans of business firms have been jangled by tax increases amounting to 600 or a thousand per cent, counting State as well as Federal afterthoughts announced after the cards were dealt, and while it is impossible to strike any figure, it is true, nevertheless, that labor budgets have been forced far out of line. All this is entirely aside from bookkeeping and accounting costs and the expense of extra legal services.

The Mayor of New York has not publicly applied his own predicament to private business, but it is plain that if he were a businessman himself he long ago would have joined in the squawk which he and his sociopolitico-economic kin have described as the selfish cry of the Tories.

Threat Of Mayor Not New Idea

SURE, THE REPEAL of the artificial and unfair tax exemption for the income from city bonds would compel the City of New York, which is his business firm just now, to pay higher rates of interest. And of course, as he says, there isn't a mayor in the country who hasn't cause for worry. But when businessmen said the same thing they were Bourbons, reptiles and economic royalists, and the fact that they couldn't keep on paying beyond their powers to earn or the hock-shop value of their properties was acclaimed as proof that American capitalism was a flop, the joyous contention of many New Dealers and of a political minority for which Mr. LaGuardia has expressed gentle solicitude, namely, the Communists.

The mayor's threat to retaliate and try to make up some of the increase in the cost of hiring money by taxing Government real estate in New York is not a new idea, but merely an extension of an old one. For the States, individually, are even now taxing one another by various subterfuges, and if they should start taxing the National Government as the sum of them all that would involve no new principle.

Up to now Mr. LaGuardia's attitude toward innovations which change the rules of business has been that of a sedentary sport in a ringside seat yelling "Murder him, Gus. He can't take it!" He didn't know those punches hurt until he got up in there and caught a couple.

A Myth And A Law

By Barnet Nover

The Latest Tangle Over Neutrality

A GROUP of Senators headed by Johnson of California, Borah of Idaho, Nye of North Dakota and Clark of Missouri, have announced that they will fight to the last ditch any attempt to wipe out the present embargo on arms, ammunition and implements of war to belligerents.

The sincerity of these men is not open to question nor can their patriotism be impugned. They share with those who oppose them on this issue and, indeed, with the overwhelming majority of Americans in and out of Congress, the desire to keep the United States out of war.

Nonetheless, their stand on the arms embargo has small basis in logic and little relationship with present-day realities. Unable or unwilling, for political reasons, to fight for the kind of neutrality legislation which the logic of their position calls for, they are all the more determined to fight for the symbol. That symbol is the embargo on arms.

THE BASIS of all the recent clamor for a mandatory neutrality law is the belief held by many Americans that the United States went to war in 1917 because of (a) the munitions makers; (b) the Wall Street bankers; (c) British propaganda and the gullibility of Americans for that propaganda; (d) the development of a one-sided wartime trade with the Entente powers which prevented us from being truly neutral and (e) the allegedly unneutral conduct of President Wilson, Secretary Lansing, Ambassador Page and some other high officials of the Government.

The weight given to these explanations as to why we joined the Allies depends, of course, on the individual. But together they represent something like a consensus of opinion among mandatory neutrality advocates as to the forces that dragged us into the war.

THERE ARE REASONS to believe that this explanation of the drift of events between 1914 and 1917 is both inaccurate and misleading. Be that as it may, the important fact is that this exercise in historical exegesis and mythmaking explains the urge for neutrality legislation. The argument is that if we avoid the alleged mistakes of World War days we shall, next time, keep out of war.

Accepting, for the moment, this thesis as valid, logic demands in the matter of war-time trade with belligerents, not only an embargo on arms, munitions and implements of war, but also an embargo on wheat, cotton, copper, oil, scrap iron and scrap steel and the thousand and one other products which a nation at war needs to carry on. It is doubtful, for instance, if our trade in arms and munitions with the Allies during the World War was, at most, more than a small percentage of the total.

SUCH A complete embargo no member of Congress has ever seriously proposed. The only suggestion approximating it has been to limit our trade to belligerents to peacetime averages but that suggestion never got very far. It has no place in the present neutrality statute which the Senate's "battalion of death" is determined to preserve.

This fact reveals the essential absurdity of the charge of Senator Clark that "repeal of an embargo would be substantially an alliance of the United States with Britain and France and with Russia, too, if the latter joins the Paris-London axis."

If the United States becomes Britain's ally simply by regaining the right to sell arms to that nation and her allies, than we are Great Britain's ally already.

Should war break out in Europe, there is nothing in the present law that would prevent us from selling to that country all the goods (other than those in the prohibited category) she is in a position to pay for. And the fact that between them Great Britain and France have billions of dollars in earmarked gold, bank balances and other quickly convertible assets in this country means that they will be able to pay for a vast quantity of such goods.

PERHAPS Senator Clark would be prepared to sacrifice all of America's trade in what used to be called noncontraband if, in doing so, the United States can stay out of war. It is doubtful if his colleagues would go along with him in this, however, or if the people in general would tolerate such a course. But it is precisely because so large a field of wartime trade will be subject to no greater restriction than the necessity that right and title to goods sold to belligerents be transferred before these goods leave the United States, that a last-ditch fight is being made for the maintenance of the arms embargo.

Of course, there is also a humanitarian argument for the refusal of lethal weapons and possibly implements of war to belligerents. By selling such articles we participate indirectly, but none the less vitally in a destructive process.

But if that is true logic demands that the embargo on arms, munitions and implements of war, now limited to wartime, be extended to peacetime, too. A machine gun or airplane bomb bought a day before war breaks out is just as lethal as one bought 24 hours later. And since there is now only a metaphysical distinction between arms per se and the raw materials out of which arms are made, it would be equally logical for Senator Clark and his colleagues of the embargo bloc to insist that we cease all trade relations with all potential belligerents.

Of course they will do nothing of the kind. They want to have their cake and eat it too. The arms embargo they clamor for is, in essence, only a sop to their troubled consciences; a left-handed gesture of abnegation of war profits their constituents will only be too anxious to rake in with the right hand. Let any one try to stop them!

President Gets 2 Veterans' Bills

The House yesterday acceded to Senate amendments to two bills affecting World War Veterans' compensation and sent the measures to the White House.

One, by Representative Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi removes the controversial misconduct clause which has barred veterans who contracted venereal diseases in the war from drawing Government compensation. About 1,100 veterans will receive $1,198,000 annually as a result of the change.

The other bill liberalizes compensation to widows and orphans of veterans, raising compensation per month for widows with no children from $22 to $30; for widows with one child from $30 to $38 and proportionately up to a maximum of $64.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Fair Repast

Grover Whalen has made a personal investigation, and reported that the average price of a dinner at the World's Fair is 43 cents. Immediately after one of these 43-cent repasts he probably went where he could get something to eat.

Grover took ten cafes at random. The highest check was 60 cents. There were two for 35 cents. It is just possible the proprietors said to the waiter: "It's for Mr. Whalen. Make it a double portion and take off 50 per cent for publicity."

Grover Whalen announces that the World's Fair is a success. It seems he has had time to look it over and see just what it amounts to.

Most of us knew it was a success the moment we heard the 2,000,000th hot dog had been sold.

"Carew Says City Must Keep Eye on Fair's Nudity."—Herald Tribune.

Don't worry; we're all concentrating.

The recent dedication of Soviet Russia's building at the New York World's Fair still has us dizzy. Grover Whalen, the very essence of success under the American system, saw that it got one of the biggest boosts to date. Mayor LaGuardia, who fought to make the world safe for democracy in the big war, paid a flowery tribute to Russia, and enough good will was spilled all over the premises to fill the aquacade.

The only thing that eased our mind and made us stop trying to figure things out was the mad rush into the Russian exhibit of hundreds of Americans who seemed to be looking for fan dancers and cold drinks.

Help

The officials of our larger cities would be the last to admit any desire to torment the sick, wrack the nerves of the jittery or drive late sleepers mad, yet they send motorcycle escorts through the streets, sirens screaming at top pitch, every few hours just to facilitate the speed of a few visitors who have plenty of time on their hands.

If we were a dictator we would hire a thousand motorcycle cops and pay them to ride up and down past the homes of the mayors and the police commissioners just putting all they had into the horns.

In some sections of the country it seems to be a grave question whether to reform the bench or just spray it.

Home Thoughts From Abroad

Give me peace and give me quiet,
And a view of Kentish hills,
And a simple English diet
With no gastronomic thrills.

I am fed up with parading,
I am fed up with the blare
Of a band that's serenading
With a patriotic air.

I have shaken hands with Presidents,
With Congress and the press,
And a hundred thousand women
Have remarked about my dress.

So I'm happy now in Britain
And a royally peaceful life,
Where I'm not on exhibition
And can be a queenly wife.

A. J. Lindsley.

Mr. Frank Gannett thinks Mr. Roosevelt should resign. Which again brings to our mind the day when as a cub reporter we sent a query to the office of Charles Mellon, then president of the New Haven road, asking bluntly if he planned to resign as rumored. Within an hour Mr. Mellon sent down a typewritten reply: "Mr. Mellon plans to resign. The time has not been set."

70 Little Girls Happily Adopt Orphan Dolls

Youngsters Promise to Be 'Good Mothers' to Their Charges Provided by Woman's Council Of Church Federation; A Few Boys Also Get Gifts

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

More than 70 little girls and two or three of their small brothers gathered yesterday morning in Calvary Baptist Church for the first of the doll adoption programs of the Woman's Council of the Washington Federation of Churches. There to welcome them were more than 100 smiling dolls from which each of the youngsters, including the boys, selected one to take home.

The dolls, wearing their Sunday best, most of them in dresses and hats which were the handiwork of members of the Woman's Council, sat in smiling rows and looked out over the tops of fruit baskets on the platform of the Sunday school room. Their outstretched arms won an instant rseponse of "ohs" and "ahs" from the children. Most of these too were dressed up for the occasion but among them were several whose little bare feet had not been fitted to new shoes as carefully as had the dolls.

Mrs. R. A. Sauer, chairman of the Juvenile Court Department of the Woman's Council, was there to see the launching of the project, as was Miss Etta Mai Russell, the council's professional Juvenile Court worker, who inaugurated the plan in Washington two summers ago. Mrs. Charles Green, chariman of the doll adoption committee, was in charge, assisted by Miss Ruth Clarke, who will supervise the Calvary center during the season. Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, council president, was not there, as she is in Lake Geneva, Wis., attending the National Convention of the Federated Church Women.

recreational activities will be provided from 9:30 to 12:30. A neighborhood party also is planned each Sunday evening for the parents of the children.

Mrs. A. H. Feelemyer, sister of Mrs. Sauer, played for the singing yesterday.. Other council members who were present as spectators were Mrs. Robert H. McNeill, who brought with her a barefooted pair of little folk, members of her Sunday school department; Mrs. Arthur Briscoe, treasurer of the council, and Mrs. C. F. Jackson, chairman of denominational representatives.. Sister Madeline Schaeffer, deaconness of Keller Memorial Lutheran Church, who will be in charge of the recreation center there, opening on Wednesday, also was present.

Today the second program will be started at Wilson Memorial Church, 754 Eleventh street southeast, under Misss Viola Saunders; tomorrow at Keller Memorial Lutheran, 907 Maryland avenue northeast; Thursday, at Union Wesley A. Hogan Calls Congress U. S. Hope of Liberty

Jackson Backs Courts; Arnold Avers Trusts Peril Free Economy

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, July 10.—A "startling parallel" between developments in the United States and Germany was drawn for the American Bar Association today, coincident with support and condemnation of the United States Supreme Court for its decisions in recent years.

Thurman W. Arnold, Assistant U. S. Attorney General, asserted "the parallel between the German development of 15 years, and to our own slower pace since 1890, is startling enough to bring home the point that we must enforce an anti-trust policy, or free economy will slip from under us."

Divergent views on constitutional interpretation were presented by Frank J. Hogan of Washington, president of the association, who said the Supreme Court was "replacing stability with instability," and Robert H. Jackson, U. S. Solicitor General, who said "we are having something of a constitutional renaissance—a rediscovery."

Parole Law Study Asked

The three speakers highlighted the day's program for 3,000 attorneys participating in the sixty-second annual meeting of the national barristers' group.

Among resolutions presented to the house of delegates, action on which will be taken later in the week, was one asking a "study of the advisability of the immediate abrogation of the parole system throughout the country" in favor of "determinate sentence laws," and a "uniform juvenile delinquency law."

Arnold told the attorneys "open agreements in restraint of trade are everywhere apparent. We are getting into a situation where everyone must belong to an organization of some kind and take orders from someone in order to stay in business."

Hogan Hits Court Trend

He described "unreasonable restraints of trade" as "the most conspicuous reasons for high construction costs," and said "a break in building prices" in some cities was expected to result from prosecutions.

"On the success or failure of the principles which . . . antitrust laws . . . represent depend the form of government in the future," he declared.

Hogan, opening the first general session, said "recent judicial construction (by the Supreme Court) has brought within the ambit of Federal control most if not all activities of the Nation.

Jackson Disputes Hogan

"What were frankly termed 'important shifts in constitutional doctrines' were in fact the most devastating destruction of constitutional limitations in the existence of the United States. No lawyer can safely advise his client what the law is. What was constitutional principle yesterday may be a discarded doctrine tomorrow."

The "recent far-reaching decisions" of the Supreme Court, Hogan added, "compel the conclusion that the American people must look to the Legislature rather than the Judiciary for the preservation of liberties."

Jackson, disputing that contention in an address on "Back to the Constitution," asserted "when we let ourselves be guided by a tolerant and far-seeing view of the art of government, we are not departing from the Constitution; we are returning to it."

There is nothing in the Constitution which provides htat there shall be no power to regulate prices or wages," the Solicitor General said.

The convention continues through Friday.

U. of Alabama Given Gorgas Bust

A life-size portrait bust of Gen. William C. Gorgas, war-time Surgeon General who conquered yellow fever and malaria during the building of the Panama Canal, has been presented to the University of Alabama, of which he was an alumnus, it was announced yesterday.

It was awarded a Diplome d'Honneur at the Overseas International Colonial Exposition at Paris, and a plaster replica is on exhibit in the Smithsonian Institute here, among the Gorgas Memorabilia.

Capital to Send Delegation to Dental Session

More than 14 Washington dentists will attend the convention of the American Dental Association in Milwaukee next week, according to Dr. Marion Falls, of 4000 Cathedral avenue northwest, president of the national organization.

Other dentists attending from this city will be Dr. Ralph Morrison, Dr. T. J. Rice, Dr. C. B. Clendenin, Dr. Marcus Burton, Dr. J. W. Burnhard, Dr. Charles D. Cole and Dr. Dudley King. More are expected to register later in the week.

Fisher Body Plant At Pontiac, Mich., Tied Up by Strike

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 10.—Solidly massed C. I. O. pickets withstood efforts of police to clear them from entrances of the Pontiac (Mich.) Fisher Body plant today as a strike of General Motors skilled workers spread to corporation units in Cleveland and Saginaw, Mich.

The C. I. O. United Automobile Workers assembled the pickets to block what union leaders said was a corporation attempt to organize a "back-to-work movement." Although pickets and police both carried clubs, none were used.

700 Reported Out

R. J. Thomas, president of the union which called the strike to enforce a demand for an agreement covering tool and die workers, engineers and maintenance men, said today, "The corporation will find larger and just as solid picket lines in Pontiac and Detroit tomorrow morning."

The union claimed that 700 skilled workers at the Fisher Body plant in Cleveland were on strike, halting "all work on 1940 body dies for Chevrolet cars." The Saginaw steering gear plant which supplies 85 per cent of steering gears for G. M. cars also was affected.

6,000 Are Idle

The strike, aimed at crippling General Motors' preparations for 1940 model production, now has made more than 6,000 workers idle.

The U. A. W.-C. I. O. presented demands for wage, hours and working condition adjustments, but deeply involved in the dispute is the C. I. O. union's battle with Homer Martin's A. F. of L. United Auto Workers.

U.S. to Employ 1,000 More Scientists

Agriculture Dept. To Assign 100 to Food-Drug Division

Science will have a much stronger hold on Government by the end of summer, it appeared yesterday, when it was learned that more than 1,000 bacteriologists, chemists, pharmacologists and chemurgists will be placed with the Department of Agriculture in the next few months.

Most of the newcomers will be assigned to four regional laboratories now being constructed by the Bureau of Agricultural Chemistry and Engineering in New Orleans, Philadelphia, Peoria, Ill., and Albany Calif.

Approximately 100 will go to the Food and Drug Administration, the work of which expanded on July 1, when the new food and drug act went into effect. From 15 to 20 of these will remain in Washington and the others will go to the 16 branch laboratories in large cities throughout the Nation. One entire new industry, that of the manufacture and sale of cosmetics, was brought under the administration's supervision by the new law.

All are being recruited slowly and by means of civil service selection, officials said.

To the agricultural laboratories will be assigned the duty of finding new uses for farm products. Between 200 and 250 scientists will be assigned to each, to push the Government's interest in chemurgy—an interest that in the last few years has given the country such products as a good varnish made from soybeans and a starch from sweet potatoes.

Women Voters Reply to Editor

The D. C. Voteless League of Women Voters not only investigates all sides of a question and assembles facts before it takes a stand, but it wants others to do the same. Mrs. M. O. Lorenz, newly elected president, has dispatched a letter to the editor of the Adrian Daily Telegram, Adrian, Mich., challenging statements made in an editorial regarding suffrage for the District, which was inserted in the Congressional Record of June 21 by Representative Earl C. Michener.

The letter denies that it was "the intention of the founding fathers that control of the Capital by the national Congress should mean denial of political rights to its citizens."

Beats States As Taxpayer

It points out that in the period between 1871 and 1874, to which the editorial referred, the people of Washington had no voting representative in Congress. It states that the District pays in national taxes, to be expended by the national Congress, more than any one of half of the States of the Union — refuting the editor's charge that it is a national parasite.

The letter quotes census figures showing that 200,000 of the District's 627,000 population is native; explains that the Commissioners are not chosen on a bipartisan basis, as the editorial stated they were; incloses charts to prove that in the last two years the Federal Government has contributed only 12 per cent rather than one-half of the District's expenses, and justifies the demand for suffrage for the District on the basis that "in a world beset on all sides by threats to democracy we think it is important to preserve and extend that institution."

District Burden To Congressmen

Regarding Representative Michener's having had the editorial inserted in the Congressional Record, the letter makes a final point:

"Inasmuch as Mr. Michener is a member of the House Judiciary Committee, before whichc hearings on District suffrage were held last year, we are surprised that he is not more familiar with the situation in the District. His lack of information is due, no doubt, to the pressure of work for which he was elected—that is, national affairs and the affairs and interests of his own district. We have always maintained that the District of Columbia is an unfair additional burden on members of Congress; the present case would seem an example in point."

Church to Maintain Recreation Center

The area in which Calvary Baptist Church is located is one of the most densely populated in the city. Miss Russell, some time ago, called at every house within a certain radius and found in one block, 90 children. To provide recreation for some of these, the Woman's Missionary Society of Calvary Baptist Church has employed Miss Clarke as director of a program to be carried on daily, beginning next week, in the Sunday School room where the children met yesterday. They will assemble today and tomorrow also. Today the girls will make little cradles for their dolls by cutting out the sides of shoe boxes and putting the cut out pieces at each end for rockers. On Mondays they will learn to sew for their dolls.

The daily programs are to be for both boys and girls, for whom

Camera and Radio Men Record Program

The actual program for the children was delayed somewhat as news cameramen took pictures and members of the staff of WJSV made a recording for a radio program to be given Thursday morning at 8:30. It was all part of an exciting morning for the children who participated willingly in the radio performance, singing "Jesus Loves Me" and explaining how they expected to be "good mothers" to their dolls, keeping them clean, sewing for them, teaching them to clean their teeth, to say their prayers, and so forth. The plan of the Woman's Council is to teach lessons to the little mothers and at the same time provide them toys and interests to make their vacations happy.

Club Women Hear Mrs. Catt

Kansas City, July 10 (AP).—Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, 80-year-old fighter for women's suffrage, urged members of her sex tonight to "keep the banner of women's rights flying until every vestige of the old tradition ordering subjection has been chased from the earth."

The venerable feminist spoke from her home at New Rochelle, N. Y., and her message was carried by radio to the 1,700 delegates here for the biennial convention of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs. Her address also was broadcast.

Commemorating 100 years—1839-1939—of hard fought battles to advance the cause of equal rights for women, Mrs. Catt said "the most important thing that happened in that century was the organized woman movement and what it did."

Turning to the women's problem in other nations, she said Sweden had enacted a law forbidding the dismissal of a woman from any work position on account of marriage.

"Germany," she said, "once confined women to 'kinder, kirche und kuchen.' Now it orders them out again to relieve the labor shortage . . .

"So the woman problem continues alive and unsettled. Sweden expands women's freedom and Germany restricts it and gives no choice of life for men or women. Let us catch up with Sweden and cut short any trend leading to the German way."

Wisconsin Society Arranges Picnic

Tea Tables Buzz With Talk of Lovely Mrs. McNutt, Likely to Be D. C. Hostess

'Will She Eventually Entertain at White House?' Many Are Asking; Lavish Party Given Here By Philippines' High Commissioner Recalled

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

LUNCHEON AND TEA TABLE TALK—what there is of it, now that the mounting thermometer has boiled society down to its summertime minimum—invariably turns sooner or later these days to the 1940 campaign. And where that's discussed, you hear the name of Paul V. McNutt mentioned a good deal more often than you might suspect.

Yesterday, at a small luncheon at the Chevy Chase Club, talk took a new turn in the wake of the announcement that Mr. McNutt is expected to head the new Federal Security Agency created under the President's executive rorganization plan. If Stephen Early, Presidential secretary, "wouldn't be surprised to see Mr. McNutt in the Administration sooner or later," nobody else would. But whether this Harding-handsome High Commissioner of the Philippines is headed for a security agency or 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue is the question you hear bandied about on all sides.

Well, either way you look at it, there are plenty of straws in the wind pointing to the possibility that another hostess, and an exceptionally attractive one at that, will soon be an addition to the Capital picture. And if the lavish party given for her husband back in February, 1938, is any indication, chances are the McNutt family might enliven the social scene no end.

Now I have never met Mrs. McNutt; have seen few photographs of her, and can pass on very little data about her. But well do I remember a glowing account given to me in bated breath by an Indiana woman who rode into Washington on that preliminary bandwagon last year and was loud in her praises of the Little Woman in the Coming Presidential candidate's life.

"SHE'S AN IDEAL woman," said my informant, whose name is forgotten although her melody lingers on. "When Mrs. McNutt was wife of the Governor of Indiana, she was distinguished for her graciousness, her forthright manner and her absolute lack of snobbery. She has more friends than any woman I know, and she couldn't be more attractive, more natural and more unselfish."

Well, if she comes to town—we shall see. Whether it's worthwhile to size her up as a possible First Lady is a matter of question—after all, as somebody said yesterday, "there are still plenty of people who aren't ready to see the Executive Mansion turned into a McNutt house.

REPORTS FROM the Philippines have it, however, that Mrs. McNutt is one of the most popular American hostesses ever to set foot on the Islands, and recent pictures prove that when it comes to looks, she's every bit as photogenic as her husband.

Back in her home State (which is Texas, and also happens to be mine), she has a host of friends who would be willing to vote for her, just to see her in the White House. Down San Antonio way, in fact, you hear nothing but lavish compliments about the former Kathleen Timolat, who became First Lady of Indiana on her way to the Philippines.

SPEAKING OF TEXAS: It looks as if several Lone Star Staters have a chance to be chatelaine of the White House. And not only on the Democratic side. In case you don't know it, Presidential Possibility Thomas Dewey's wife also hails from Texas . . . to be exact, from my home town, Sherman (which was NOT named after the general who marched through Georgia).

Back there, her story has recently been outlined over many a bridge table. She's the girl who went to the big city with star dust in her eyes; got a job as a choir singer by day and a stage singer by night; married a choir-singing law student; abandoned her career for domesticity and ceased making headlines for the home-town paper.

WELL, SHE'S BACK in the news now with a vengeance and anybody in Sherman who can claim kinship or friendship with the former Frances Hutt is gaining prestige by the minute.

"Do you know Mrs. Thomas Dewey?"

"Frances Hutt? Well, I should say I do!"

They say that question and answer will start the ball of conversation rolling any time around Sherman now. I mean to try it some time soon.

OF COURSE, the Number One First Lady possibility, as far as most Texans look at it, is still Mrs. John Nance Garner . . . who lets her husband do most of the talking; prefers taking dictation to attending teas; refuses to buy a dress for only one occasion, even if it's a party for the King of England; and still has the same friends she made back in the days when Cactus Jack was running for the Texas Legislature.

Capital Awaits First Of Sunset Symphonies

Scores of Notables Plan to Attend Concert Tomorrow Night at Watergate; Clear Weather Forecast for Opening

The weatherman has promised, whether he keeps the promise or not is another matter—a clear night for the opening of the Sunset Symphonies tomorrow evening at the Potomac Watergate.

As Washington slowly but surely sinks into the social doldrums these "dog days," the concerts of the National Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Dr. Hans Kindler, add a much needed fillip to the calendar.

Scores of notables will be seated at the Watergate, where the accoustical shell is to be moored in its usual place. Attorney General Frank L. Murphy has signified his intention to attend the opening. Those from the service set planning to attend are Admiral and Mrs. William D. Leahy and Brig. Gen. G. C. Marshall, newly appointed chief of staff of the Army.

The program with which Dr. Kindler will open the series at 8 o'clock is composed of "Toccata," by Frescobaldi; Brahms' "First Symphony in C Minor," Handel's "Largo," ballet music by Schubert, "Schoenherr's "Perpetuum Mobile," Sibelius' Valse Triste"—which is by request, and the polka and fuge from "Schwanda," by Weinberger.

Many Notables To Be Present

Others who will hear the first concert of the season include Senator William H. King, Representative Caroline O'Day, Representative Joseph McArdle, Representative Jennings Randolph, Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director general of Pan-American Union, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Edward Warner, Civil Aeronautics Authority, Frank Russell, E. D. Merrill, Mrs. Eva Whitford Lovette, Mrs. Sadie Orr Dunbar, E. S. Pardoe, S. J. Solomon and Floyd B. Akers.

The soloists whom Dr. Kindler announced would appear during this summer's Sunset Symphony concerts are all—their positions in the musical world notwithstanding—decidedly on the youthful side.

Just to mention a few: Gloria Persins, brilliant young violinist, (July 16); Robert Crawford, widely known opera, concert and radio barytone, (July 19); Ossy Renardy, Viennese violinist who scored an amazing success at his New York debut last year, (July 26), and Virginia Johnson, beautiful young American soprano, (July 30).

Opera Promised For August

The symphonies consist of 12 concerts to be played every Wednesday and Saturday evening during the six-week period ending Wednesday, August 23. Wednesday, August 2, will be given over to production of the first opera to be presented during the series.

It will be Puccini's "Madame Butterfly" under the direction of Alexander Smallens, with a cast of Metropolitan Opera singers and with Mrs. Smallens conducting the National Symphony Orchestra.

Dr. Kindler will conduct the first and last concerts, and on the intervening Wednesdays and Sundays the orchestra will be led by Burle Marx, Rudolph Ganz, Reginald Stewart, and for the first time with the National Symphony Orchestra, Efrem Kurtz, Erno Rapee and Charles O'Connell. Mr. Kurtz is well known to Washington audiences through his work with the Monte Carlo Ballet Russe.

Headed by Paul Bacquet, vice president of the French Merchant Marine Commission, they include Lucien Gasparin, Francis Blancho, former undersecretary of the French navy department; Ray-Jean Rolland and Andre Berthault. Mme. Gasparin and Mme. Blancho accompanied their husbands.

Because of the death of the Secretary of the Navy, Claude A. Swanson, the Ambassador, for the first time since his arrival, did not release the dinner list for last night's dinner party. As the visitors plan to leave for New York today, the envoy was unable to postpone the party.

The Frenchmen, whose trip to the United States has been short, only ten days in all, will sail tomorrow aboard the Normandie for home.

Adelaide Moffett Rumored Engaged To Chicagoan

Dame rumor is busy with Adelaide Moffett Brooks again. The night club singing daughter of James A. Moffett is expected to marry A. G. Cox Atwater, of Chicago, within six months.

Since her seventeenth year the former Adelaide Moffett has been one of the topnotch socialite singers and her friends are wondering what will happen to her career in the event that she becomes Mrs. Atwater. It was for her career that Adelaide broke her engagement to Henry Gibbins, jr., son of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Henry Gibbins, of this city. Mrs. Brooks demonstrated her singing ability here last season at the opening of the Mayflower cocktail lounge.

At the moment Mrs. Brooks is in New York after completing her engagement at Fete's Monte Carlo and she is scheduled to open at the fashionable Piping Rock Club in Saratoga when the season starts the Thirty-first of this month.

Gen. Marshall Dinner Host To Gen. Trujillo

Acting Chief of Staff Gives Party at Mayflower For Distinguished Guest

Generalissimo Rafael L. Trujillo, whose social schedule here has been greatly curtailed due to the period of mourning for Secretary Swanson, was guest of honor last evening at a large dinner given by the acting chief of the United States Army staff, Brig. Gen. George C. Marshall. The party, which was attended by a number of high ranking officers, was given at the Mayflower Hotel.

Guests invited to dine with the distinguished head of the Dominican army included the Dominican Minister, Andres Pastoriza; Maj. Gen. Walter L. Reed, Maj. Gen. Allen W. Gullion, Maj. Gen. A. H. Sunderland, Maj. Gen. Henry Gibbins, Maj. Gen. Frederick W. Boschen, Maj. Gen. John L. DeWitt, Maj. Gen. Walter C. Baker, Maj. Gen. A. H. Blanding, Maj. Gen. George A. Lynch, Maj. Gen. Julian L. Schley, Maj. Gen. John K. Herr, Maj. Gen. Robert M. Danford, Maj. Gen. Charles M. Wesson, Maj. Gen. R. McC. Beck, Maj. Gen. James C. Magee.

Also Brig. Gen. Lorenzo D. Gasser, Brig. Gen. G. P. Tyner, Brig. Gen. G. V. Strong, Col. J. Edgar Hoover, Col. E. R. W. McCabe, Col. John A. Crane, Lieut. Col. A. R. Harris, Lieut. Col. Orlando Ward, and Capt. S. L. Parks.

The United States Minister to the Dominican Republic, Henry Norweb, was also among the guests, as were Dr. Francis E. Benzo, the Dominican minister of public health and personal physician to Gen. Trujillo, Emilio Garcia Godoy; Jose Maria Bonetti Burgos, secretary to Gen. Trujillo; Lieut. Col. Charles A. McLaughlin, of the Dominican army, who is an ex-marine and an American citizen; Col. Antonia Layba Pou, military aide to Gen. Trujillo; Capt. Salvador Cobian Tarra, another aide of Gen. Trujillo, and Maximo Vasquez, of the Dominican foreign relations department.

Tea This Afternoon At White House

This afternoon President Roosevelt will entertain Gen. Trujillo at tea at the White House at 4:30 o'clock, and tomorrow the Dominican Chief of Staff will be off for New York, where he will make a brief visit to the World's Fair. He will then start an extensive tour of the United States, which will take him almost a month. At the end of that time he expects to visit Washington again and the Dominican Minister hopes to give the reception then which was canceled last Friday evening.

Under ordinary circumstances such a cancelation of official entertainments as took place over the week-end would give a vsiiting dignitary a chance for a rest and breathing spell. With Gen. Trujillo it afforded his many friends, particularly among the Marine Corps, an opportunity for small unofficial parties in his honor and as a result his schedule was almost more crowded than originally planned.

Several Unofficial Parties Given

Yesterday morning Gen. Trujillo visited Quantico, where he was greeted by his old friend, Maj. Gen. J. C. Breckinridge, whom he met when Gen. Breckingridge was on duty in Santa Domingo. Official military ceremonies had been scheduled, but due to the fact that the Marine Corps is technically a part of the Navy, the ceremonies were of an informal tone. Gen. Trujillo drove through the post from 10 a. m. until shortly after noon with Gen. Breckinridge, and then was entertained at luncheon at the Officers' Mess at the post.

Guests at the event included Brig. Gen. and Mrs. R. P. Williams, Mrs. Lola Strobhar, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Emilie Moses, Miss Betty Moses, Col. and Mrs. J. C. Smith, Col. and Mrs. A. F. Howard, Miss Billy Howard, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. D. L. Brewster, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Field Harris, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. O. T. Pfeiffer, Lieut. Col and Mrs. Raphael Griffin.

Also Maj. and Mrs. G. R. Rowan, Maj. and Mrs. P. A. Lesser, Maj. and Mrs. J. D. Waller, Capt. Otto Salzman, Capt. F. P. Pyzick, Capt. and Mrs. J. R. Hester, Lieut. and Mrs. J. C. Murray among the guests

On Friday evening, Col. Henry Larsen, of the United States Marine Corps, entertained at an unofficial stag dinner in honor of Gen. Trujillo at 2400 Sixteenth Street.

Iron-Willed Mother of Independent Means Moves In On Widowed Daughter, Wrecking Her Home Life

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I notice that you have been having a run on trouble-making mothers recently. While your hand is in, perhaps you can tell me what to do about mine. I am a widow with two daughters. We own our home and everything in it and pay all expenses. Nevertheless, it is mother's establishment and we just have to fit ourselves in as best we can. She has the best bedroom and we three have to share the other. No maid will put up with her and we have to do all the work. There is a maid whom we love, who would take marvelous care of us, but she won't stay with mother in the house.

Mother approves of nothing that we wear, or say, or do. Yet it makes her furious if she is not included in every invitation. When we have guests she sits like disapproving Doom in our midst, and often is extremely rude. She criticizes us and discusses our private affairs with any who will listen. In other words, Miss Haworth, we have no home at all. When she goes away, even for a day, the children are like different girls, so gay and carefree and happy, and I feel as though a millstone were temporarily lifted from my chest.

It isn't a question of money. She has enough income to board elsewhere. There are pleasant places where she could go and want for nothing in the world. And the fact that I do not want to live with her does not mean that I would not always feel my responsibility toward her. I will always be at hand if I am needed. I think we might like each other much better if we were relieved of the constant friction which living together imposes. I have tried to discuss the matter with her, without emotion. But there isn't the least use for me to try to be diplomatic. She adores a scene and even as I flee, I am told that I want to "throw her out" in her old age, after all she has done for me, etc. She says she will not budge, and she dares and defies me to try to put her out.

Thinking that there seems to be no solution, we have all tried to adjust ourselves to the situation. We have prayed and sought spiritual help from sources that have never failed us in other matters. But all we can accomplish is outward acceptance. We are inwardly chafed and and resentful and wretched. What can we do? There must be many others like us, who need your help. L. C.

A Desperate Remedy

DEAR L. C.: As you may have heard, desperate afflictions require desperate remedies. Apparently it would take a "chip off the old block," in grim determination of temperament, to pry this lady despot loose from her ill-gotten and ruthlessly maintained seat in the dictator's saddle. It is entirely possible that, in order to compel a change, you may have to give up your home for a year or so.

If you are in deadly earnest about wanting to assert yourself as mistress of your own domain, leaving your mother no choice but to take up residence under a separate roof, I suggest that you lease your home—furnished or unfurnished—for six months or a year, during which period you and your daughters may either squeeze yourselves into a small apartment which allows no space for her; or "go out to board."

At the end of that time, when your mother necessarily will have accustomed herself to a life apart, you three may move back into the house—with the two daughters promptly pre-empting one bedroom and you the other, and with the beloved maid installed in a housekeeper's role. As your mother points out, you cannot very well remove her by force from the home. But, on the other hand, she cannot refuse to move out if a stranger family is moving in, with a lessee's full proprietary right for the duration of the lease.

If you are willing to employ this desperate strategy—and I see no alternative, all things considered—complete your plans without inviting your mother's interference and carry them through in stony disregard of any tantrums she may throw. A limited season of acute domestic turmoil, leading eventually to freedom, is certainly preferable to an indefinite commitment to the present setup.

List the house with rental agencies, for the winter season or for a year. Get a line on suitable accommodations for yourself and your daughters (for the term of exile from home). Make a similar (but undercover) survey on your mother's behalf, and present your findings to her at the eleventh hour—in case she makes no effort on her own behalf—so that she cannot say you turned her out without having made thoughtful provision for her welfare. Having found a lessee, evacuate the premises as per arrangement, when the day comes for him to take over. What choice will your mother have, then, but to move?

Don't tell her what your future plans are. But if your daughters are of discretionary age, they may share your confidence throughout. It is a sorry commentary on your mother's intelligence and sense of fair play that such extreme measures should need to be considered. But in view of her viciously unreasonable attitude, and unswerving determination to make three lives miserable without any warrant, I maintain that you are fully entitled to saw off the limb on which she has taken her dictatorial stance. M. H.

Homespun Dutch Treat

One of the numerous local girls to make good with the Dutch is Izetta Jewel, jr., playing at the Cross Roads Theater in "Biography." She goes Dutch in a full-skirted dirndl, which with its big Hollandaise pockets gives her the air of a pretty blonde peasant. Her belt is handwoven in string and raffia, adding to the homespun mode. Periwinkle-blue rayon crepe fashions both the skirt and parka which permits varied moods. A guileless pink-violet makes the collarless bodice

Your Figure Madame!

Weighing Should Be Done at the Same Time Every Day

THERE is, as most reducers discover, always one place on the bathroom floor where the scales do not register quite so high. You wouldn't think of tampering with the indicator! That wouldn't be honest! But, after all, the scales might be registering too high except in that one spot and you feel you are entitled to the benefit of any doubt as to what you weigh.

The moral of that is, don't take your daily weighing too seriously! Almost the first thing some reducers do after getting home from a bridge luncheon or tea is to step on the scales to see if they have gained—as they suspect they have! If the indicator is still where it was that morning, their elation knows no bounds.

Weigh Daily at Same Time

But a scale is neither as prompt nor as accurate as a cash register in ringing up gains and losses. Don't be stepping to the scales several times a day to see whether your weight is up or down. The registration of your weight may vary as much as 2 pounds from one day to the next irrespective of your actual gain or loss. When the indicator persists on going up or down, however, you have an accurate index to your weight trend.

This is no attempt to deprive you of the pleasure of daily weighing. If you like to weigh every day, by all means do so! But try to weigh at the same time every day and under as nearly as possible the same bodily conditions. Your clothing may affect the registration by as much as 2 pounds, so make a point of weighing with the same amount of clothing, or with none at all.

Don't hop on the scales the first thing in the morning, for you might weigh heavier. And don't weigh right after taking a long drink of water or a heavy meal. Usually the best time for weighing is between 10 and 11 o'clock in the morning.

Structure Makes Difference

The object of this close association with the scales is, of course, to get down to what you regard as normal weight. If you have large bones, don't aim too low. It would not only be discouragingly hard for you to bring your weight down to a point that is too low for you, but you would not look or feel well if you succeeded.

With a generous frame, your normal weight may be 10 per cent above the average given for your height. This does not mean the average listed on the so-called standard charts, however, for these lists really are averages, irrespective of build.

You should allow 100, 105 or 110 pounds for your first 5 feet of height, depending on whether your build is small, medium or large. Then allow 5 additional pounds for each inch by which your height exceeds 5 feet. With a very large frame, normal weight may be as high as 10 per cent above these weights for type, and the new "Height-Weight-Structure Chart for Women" lists four different weights for the same height.

Plenty of Light For Make-Up

Geraldine Fitzgerald, movie actress, has the right idea when she puts on a make-up to be scrutinized by daylight. She hangs a large portable mirror from her window lock, throws up the shades, pulls back the curtains and has the perfect outdoor light.

Knowing that it is necessary to illumine the face as well as its reflections, Geraldine not only has a light attached to her dressing table, but arranges a standing lamp with strong, indirect light behind her, before beginning an evening make-up.

Fashions for Reformers

WEARING the new fall hat in which she will make a reform tour of bathing beaches shortly, Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey held a brief press conference yesterday.

Mrs. DeGoofey

While girl reporters gurgled admiringly over Mrs. DeGoofey's new chapeau, the intrepid president of the Do Something About It League posed obligingly for photographers.

"Naturally, all this publicity concerning my personal apparel is very painful to me," said Mrs. DeGoofey. "However, I feel that I should make the sacrifice for the cause . . . are you gentlemen sure now you have enough shots? . . . All right. Now in what editions of the papers will these photographs appear? . . . Thank you and come again."

"What is your feeling, Mrs. DeGoofey, about the fall hat situation?" interposed an editorial paragrapher.

"I think I have it very well in hand—to date," was the reply. "Early fall hats, I believe, are not going to be quite as weird as usual. Now, as you see, I have a very conservative model myself—but then, of course, I am a very conservative woman.

Relief From Snoods Is Promised

"Now it is quite possible that a little later I may do something about snoods, if they continue to hang on. In fact, you may quote me as saying that I am getting thoroughly tired of seeing so many women looking as if they banged on their hats just after they got up and had forgotten to take off their hair nets.

"I am also thinking of demanding an age limit on the wearing of berets, which as usual are looming in many fantastic shapes on the fall scene. And then I shall of course continue my perennial campaign against dunce cap crowns.

"Another dangerous influence in fall fashions I expect to watch closely is the bustle. I have a feeling that once it gains ground that all women with—er—well prominent posteriors will take to it like ducks to water. However, it is a little early yet to announce my complete campaign plans. A little later I shall issue a complete statement of my position on fall clothes."

"What bathing suit reforms do you contemplate, Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked a sports writer.

"First of all I am going to try to get all panther men banned from all beaches. I feel something should be done at once about both the paunchy and the skinny males who seem to have become imbued with Tarzan complexes. Leopard skin swim suits on adult men bookkeepers, bond salesmen, government clerks, floor walkers, etc., are even worse than little girl bathing suits with ruffles and pantalettes on dowagers.

Beach Bald-Headed Row to Be Banned

"The divided swim suit also is on my blacklist, especially when it is worn by women who have a flat tire in the space between bra and panties.

"Now then—get this everybody—I am planning a Nation-wide beach campaign against all bald, or flabby, or bony, or knockkneed or potbellied men beachcombers who lie around on the sand making appraisals of women's figures. In fact I hope to devise a licensing system whereby any man will first have to stand test as an Adonis himself before he is permitted to comment on any woman's legs or torso. Even my old enemy, Senator Tweef, assures me he will help get such a measure through Congress."

"If this isn't too personal a question, Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked an editor of a picture page, "would you mind saying just what type of costume you yourself expect to wear on the beach while conducting your reforms?"

"Me? Oh, I have a perfectly darling little pink satin lastex suit. And by the way, I have a complete itinerary here of my beach tour which you may want to send to your photographic services along my route."

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

WE'RE having a close look at "the new Turkish woman" these days—the one who emerged from the harem and the veil by dictatorial order after the war. The name of the subject under the microscope is Ismet Sanli—a writer, a lecturer and at present on the staff of Dr. Tor, her country's high commissioner to the local County Fair.

She's lovely to look at, and local men may be mighty glad that the veil was abolished at last. "We Turkish women really owe our freedom to the late Kemal Ataturk," she tells me. "He had a wonderful mother, and he urged equality for us as soon as he rose to power. Now we have hundreds of women doctors, and many judges and legislators." Imagine—all that in a scant 20 years! Some Ataturk, he was.

Ismet herself, daughter of a newspaper publisher, came to us first in 1931. She remained to take an A. B. from California, and later her A. M. from Southern California. She earned her way through college, incidentally. Now she thinks she'll stay on and take a doctorate at Columbia, writing all the time for a newspaper in Ankara, her country's capital. She's mighty proud of her country and its new women, is this pretty Turk, and in the meantime she helps forward her nation's interests out at the show grounds and arouses plenty of interest in herself.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Well, we New Yorkites had a brief but hectic look at Mr. Ty Power and his lovely French bride, Annabella. Our mob of juvenile monsters was pretty easy on the newlyweds until it came time for the boat to sail—and then over a thousand of them fought to the pier. But the Powers fooled 'em—sneaked aboard by a baggage port and gave the darling pests a complete miss. Ty's going to meet his pa-and-ma-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Charpentier, for the first time. They'll love him because he's young and handsome, and, if you know the French, you'll know they won't object to his being a reech American cinema actor, either.

More sailors of all sorts in port this year. At present we're enjoying a visit from the Canadian gobs of two destroyers, here to help celebrate Canada Day. Soon three French cruisers, with their French tars. Local girls are agog and agob.

Ice Cream Recipe, Pop-o-Top, Given by Mrs. Rasmussen

By Martha Ellyn.
The Post Food Editor.

Favorite recipes of leading home economists of Washington will be featured daily in the Homemaker.

THE GOODNESS of ice cream is beyond reproach. Especially in the summer is this universal food in demand, because it is one of the best cool desserts obtainable, not only because of its high food value, but because of its application to fagged or active appetites alike.

Mrs. Rasmussen

Pop-O-Top

A new summer-time wrinkle that can be enjoyed by all ages, and served as a special treat when entertaining or as a casual something when something refreshing is needed, may be fashioned from the following directions for Pop-O-Top which Mrs. Rasmussen has contributed. She says:

"This summer combination has a long list of reasons why it is a favorite. It is simple to prepare, looks like a lot for a small cost, has taste appeal, zest and coolness. Try it on your family for summer supper or lunch. This is the way to make it: Into an ice tea glass put a portion of strawberry ice cream. Fill glasses slowly with bottled strawberry soda. Serve at once. Eight may be served from one quart. Other delightful combinations made in the same way are: Vanilla ice cream and soda; Black Kow ice cream and root beer; pineapple sherbet and ginger ale.

Full 1940 Suits To Help Fat Men Look Like Gable

Boston (AP)—Portly businessmen will be able to dress like Clark Gable or Robert Taylor without appearing incongruous, according to the 1940 fashion forecast of the International Association of Clothing Designers.

The style committee reported at the concluding session of their twenty-ninth annual four-day convention that men's wearing apparel next year "will follow the esthetic lines so flattering to the average man in that there will be an increased fullness and even an exaggeration throughout the body and at the waist line to a small close hip."

This new note, they predicted, will benefit the corpulent man to a "greater degree than heretofore."

Outstanding garments in this group will be the double-breasted drape and the three-button single-breasted drape. All men's garments will be longer.

Pastel shades of green and blue with an occasional touch of yellow will be the height of fashion, Committee Chairman Emil Schwind said.

Radio Men Draft Looser Code of Ethics

Revisions Would Allow Sale of Time for Discussion of Strikes

Special Dispatch to The Post

Atlantic City, N. J., July 10.—The National Association of Broadcasters, in convention here to draft a code of ethics and standards of practice, was presented tonight with a drastically revised plan of self-government.

The new proposals, approved by a committee on standards, eliminates many of the bans placed on radio material by the same committee three weeks ago.

The most significant change proposed will remove the earlier plan to force stations to refuse to sell radio time for discussion of issues arising from strikes. The new plan also reverses the committees previous objection to continuing the practice of selling program time to religious groups and denominations.

It provides that stations carrying broadcasts on controversial issues must provide opportunity for equal discussion of both sides of the topic, but will leave individual stations to decide when their programs are controversial.

The new code will be presented for discussion and action at a meeting of the convention's 400 delegates tomorrow afternoon. Many members had objected that the original code was too detailed in its limitations on individual stations.

The code, a statement of general principles governing radio presentation of advertising, entertainment, news programs and controversial speeches and discussions, is intended to bind the 422 member stations of the N. A. B. to practices which are ethical and in good taste.

Changes also were made in the definitions of standards of practice which accompanies the code.

The code is expected to find opposition on the convention floor tomorrow. Operators of smaller independent stations charge the code has been dictated by major radio networks and large independents. Similar questions were raised by owners of stations affiliated with the networks.

Edison Names New Destroyers For Swanson, Inventor Father

The Navy yesterday honored its late chief, Secretary Claude A. Swanson, in assigning names to 23 ships in the 1940 building program.

Following the customs of naming destroyers for persons in the Navy hall of fame, Acting Secretary Edison went back into early naval history for designations for all but two of the eight vessels. He named the other U. S. S. Edison, for his father, Thomas A. Edison, greatest American inventor and president of the Naval Consulting Board from 1915 until his death.

The new 45,000-ton battleships, to be the largest in the world, were given the names Iowa and New Jersey. They are under construction at the New York and Philadelphia Navy Yards. Two cruisers of a new type, on which plans are now being completed, will be known as the Cleveland and Columbia.

Two seaplane tenders now building at the Puget Sound Navy Yard were named Casco for the bay near Portland, Me., and Mackinac for the strait.

Eight new submarines, as usual, were named for fish. Three now building at the Portsmouth, N. H., Navy Yard, were to be christened: Marlin, Grayling, and Grenadier. One under construction at the Mare Island Navy Yard was called the Gudgeon, another not yet awarded to a building yard was named the Mackerel, and three building at the Electric Boat Co., Groton, Conn., were designated as the Gar, Grampus, and Grayback. A repair ship in the program will be known as the Vulcan.

Two destroyers building at Bath, Me., were named for Capt. Melanchthon T. Woolsey and Lieut. Augustus C. Ludlow, heroes of the War of 1812. Two vessels under construction at the Boston Navy Yard were named for Rear Admiral Charles Wilkes, of Civil War fame, and the Nicholson family, which gave the early Navy five ranking officers. Another was designated the Ericsson, for the inventor. With the Edison, it is under construction at Kearney, N. J. Another vessel was named for a Civil War naval commander, Capt. Duncan N. Ingraham. It is building, with the Swanson, at the Charleston, S. C., Navy Yard.

Bumper Corn Crop May Lead To Quota Sales

Referendum Dicision Will Be Made After August 10 Report

By the Associated Press.

Soon after the Crop Reporting Board had forecast a 2,570,795,000-bushel corn crop for this year, officials indicated yesterday they might have to move to invoke strict marketing quota provisions of the farm law in order to cope with the surplus problem.

Such a feed-grain crop, added to an estimated surplus of between 400,000,000 and 450,000,000 bushels from previous years, would pile up a supply that might require a farmer referendum on marketing quotas, the officials said.

If quotas were approved by two-thirds of the corn-belt farmers voting in a referendum, producers would be required to store their portion of unneeded supplies or pay a penalty tax on 10 cents a bushel.

A decision as to whether to hold a referendum will not be made until after the August 10 crop report.

Although farmers co-operated with the Agriculture Depratment's planting program by seeding less corn this year, the indicated production was considerably higher than had been anticipated. It is 1 per cent above last year's bumper crop and far above the 1928-37 average of 2,309,674,000 bushels.

Factors contributing to the unexpectedly huge crop prospects, the board said, were unusually favorable weather conditions in June and a sharply increased acreage planted to high-yielding hybrid corn.

Officials also foresaw the possibility of surplus-producing problems for tobacco farmers in the board's forecast of a 1939 crop of 1,654,622,000 pounds. Such a production would be 20 per cent larger than last year and 22 per cent above the 1928-37 average.

Tobacco growers increased their planting considerably this spring after voting in referenda last winter to remove strict marketing quota provisions of the farm law.

The indicated wheat production is in line with anticipated needs. The board forecast the crop at 716,655,000 bushels compared with 930,801,000 harvested last year and a 1928-37 average of 752,952,000 bushels. The estimate was divided as follows among types: Winter wheat 537,767,000 bushels, durum wheat 30,890,000 bushels nad other spring wheat 147,998,00 bushels.

World wheat prices sank yesterday to lows that had not been touched this early in the season for six to eight years, Chicago reported.

Mrs. Schrein Gets 2 to 4 Years In Theft Case

New York, July 10.—A probation report made public today as Mrs. Lillian Schrein was sentenced to serve from two to four years for grand larceny and forgery declared she stole more than $500,000 from Martin Beck, the theatrical producer, and in three years lost $190,000 gambling on horses.

Although Mrs. Schrein, mother of three children, was tried for thefts of $60,000, she was convicted on only three counts of the 44-count indictment, two of forgery and one of grand larceny involving only a few thousands.

Irving Mendelson, her counsel, pleaded for leniency and referred to her testimony during the trial that Beck had been intimate with her over a period of several years. Beck, the uncle of Mrs. Schrein's husband, denied the stories of intimacy.

House G.O.P. Backs D.C. in Tax Deadlock

Dirksen Says Party Leaders Will Vote For Conferees' Revenue Report

An attempt will be made today in the Senate and House to break the deadlock which has tied up the District revenue and supply bills. House conferees yesterday made conflicting predictions on the District tax conference report.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, one of the conferees, predicted the House will adopt the report which recommends a low-rate income tax and a $6,500,000 Federal payment.

A short while previously, Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, forecast flat rejection of the compromise plan and stated he would fight it on the floor. Although the chairman of the House conferees, Nichols was not present when the agreement was reached.

Republicans to Agree

Dirksen said Republican leaders had agreed to go along with the House conferees in accepting the compromise in order to expedite adjournment. They pointed out that refusal of the House to agree to a compromise in the lump sum controversy would put Congress in an embarrassing position if President Roosevelt sends a special message relative to the District legislative situation.

Nichols explained he is opposed to the conference report on three grounds—increase in the lump-sum payment, restriction of the income tax to persons "domiciled" in Washington and authorization for another tax and fiscal relations study by a joint Congressional committee.

No Word From President

The House twice has voted overwhelmingly against any raise in the lump sum above $5,000,000, Nichols pointed out, and he said it is ridiculous to expect it will reverse itself in such short order.

Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, champion of the larger Federal contribution, will submit the conference report to the Senate first under the Congressional rule. It then will be called up in the House by Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee either today or tomorrow.

There had been no word on Capitol Hill yesterday of a message from the President despite his statement through a White House secretary last week.

Would Take Capital

The United States should not be "burdened with the expense of the District of Columbia," Representative Cramer (Democrat), of California, declared last night before a meeting of local Knights of Columbus.

The District must "stand on its own feet," he said, either by increasing taxes or cutting expenses. "You never had a real depression here," he told the group.

The Representative offered in the name of his home State "to take over the capital" with or without the elaborate Federal offices, indicating that the move would be highly profitable.

The newly elected grand knight of the Potomac Council, Robert L. Sheridan, was installed at the meeting, succeeding Andrew McCallum. As a gift of appreciation the council bestowed upon McCallum the fourth degree, highest in the K. of C. Elections were held last Monday.

Lyle O'Rourke To Be Feted by Commerce Board

Lyle F. O'Rourke, new national director of the Washington Junior Board of Commerce, will be honored at a board luncheon in the Annapolis Hotel Thursday, marking also the selection of Washington as the 1940 convention city of the U. S. Junior Chamber of Commerce.

O'ROURKE

O'Rourke was elected to the national board at the recent convention at Tulsa, Okla., where he presented the 1940 bid of the Washington organization.

The luncheon also will call attention to the board's accomplishments during the administration of O'Rourke as president. Trophies presented by the national organization will be given chairmen of the committees responsible for membership and publicity programs judged to be the best in the country, the traffic safety campaign which won second prize award of $150, and the projects for clean-up, paint-up and get-out-the-vote which also won recognition at the convention.

C. R. Abbott Dies; NewsPhotographer

Charles Richard Abbott, 66, pioneer news photographer and manager for 26 years of the news photo service of Underwood & Underwood, died Saturday at his home in East Orange, N. J., the Associated Press reported.

A Canadian by birth, Mr Abbott was in charge of the selection and distribution of news pictures during the World War and in that capacity was responsible for many of the picture "scoops" of the period. He was retired about ten years ago.

Nadine Petrey, 18, winner of many Washington beauty contests, eloped to Frederick, Md., and married Bernard Bishop, Columbus University student, it was revealed yesterday. Hubby watches as Nadine cooks her first meal

Last Year's Halloween Ruler Reveals Marriage as She Cooks First Meal; Parents, Unworried, Give Blessing

It's love on a dime—but nevertheless love—for Nadine Petrey, 18, and Bernard Bishop, 21, who yesterday announced their marriage which took place in Frederick, Md., on March 31. Nadine cooked her first meal at her new home, 1460 Euclid street northeast, last night.

A junior at Central High School, Nadine has been in several Washington beauty contests. She was chosen Queen of Washington's Halloween celebration last year, has had an M-G-M screen test, and has appeared in amateur theatrical productions in the District.

The pretty bride was a favorite to win the crown in the "Miss Washington" contest to be sponsored by the Wilson Line Friday evening, but her marriage makes her ineligible, she learned yesterday.

Bernard, a native of Wichita, Kans., has finished his third year in Columbus University and is a clerk in the Civil Aeronautics Authority. He hopes to return to school next year, while Nadine is not sure she wants to go back.

Nadine and Bernard met two years ago as neighbors when she was living with her parents at 1807 Irving street northwest, and he was living at 1811. They wouldn't call it love at first sight, but "we sort of liked each other right from the start."

In March they decided that there was no use in waiting indefinitely to get married, so they rode out to Frederick. Nadine's parents were informed of their marriage by a telegram yesterday. Are they worried? Not at all. Bernard's a fine boy.

Detroit Expert Scouts Claim Bogota Painting Is a Raphael

Dr. Wilhelm Reinhold Valentiner, of the Detroit Institute of Art, yesterday declared he attached "little importance" to claims that the "Madonna of Bogota" is a Raphael original, according to the Associated Press.

Dr. Valentiner was termed "one of the foremost experts in this country" on Renaissance painting, by Jeremiah O'Connor, curator of the Corcoran Gallery here, and by R. P. Tolman, acting director of the National Collection of Fine Arts. Both, expressing the opinion that the "find" was another "false alarm," said Dr. Valentiner's judgment could be accepted as authoritative.

Dr. Valentiner said he had not seen the painting, but that it was "extremely unlikely" it was an original.

Prof. Santiago Martinez Delgado, of the University of Bogata, who took the painting to Chicago for examination recently, said he found it in a Bogota home, and that it had been in possession of one family for four centuries. Mrs. Ruth Van Sickle Ford, president of the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts, said she was convinced it was a Raphael.

"Copies of Raphael's work were much in evidence in Spain in the sixteenth century and many of these were exported to South America," Dr. Valentiner said. "Many of these South American paintings have been hailed as Raphaels in the past, but none has ever been proved genuine."

Capital News In Brief

From Jail

A horse saved an equestrian from at least a night in jail yesterday—all because the police didn't know what they would do with the horse once its rider was locked up.

Second Precinct police were called to the 1200 block Fifth street northwest by a policewoman who feared that a slightly inebriated horseman would hurt himself as he vainly tried to mount the unsaddled dobbin.

Realizing they would have to lock up both mare and master, police instead convinced the citizen to lead his nag gently home.

Moonlight Cruise

The Federation of Business Men's Associations will relax on a moonlight cruise down the Potomac tonight aboard the Wilson Line ship, City of Washington. There will be dancing to the music of McWilliams' orchestra.

Woe and More Woe

It was twofold woe for Cletus J. Connor yesterday, twice involved with the law, once on each side of the fence.

Connor, who lives at 1359 Harvard street northwest, posted $2 collateral at Police Headquarters for overtime parking. He started home by taxi but was soon back again—to report that the cab driver had taken him to the wrong address and robbed him of $41.

Rep. Hartley Indorsed

Representative Hartley (Republican), of New Jersey, last night was indorsed as G. O. P. candidate for Governor of New Jersey in a resolution adopted by the national executive committee of the Independent Citizens League, in session at the Willard Hotel.

Things Happened Fast

Mann, 40, was working with steel wool and paint remover on the floor of his home at 3320 Park place northwest. A strand of steel wool contacted a floor electric plug, setting the paint remover on fire. Mann was treated for burns to the left hand by the firemen called to the scene.

King to Back Reorganizing Bill for D. C.

Will Sponsor Measure Similar to Kennedy's In Senate if House Will Act, He Says

Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee, yesterday stated he would introduce a companion measure in the Senate today to the Kennedy reorganization bill and hold hearings providing the House indicated it intends to act on the legislation at this session.

At the same time it was indicated that the revised bill will be opposed by a majority of the District Commissioners, its only defender being George E. Allen.

Senator King conferred in executive session with the Commissioners and other District officials yesterday and afterwards said he had asked for a detailed report from them on the Kennedy reform plan. The report, he said, will be made by department heads affected as well as the Commissioners.

Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, has called a meeting of his sub-committee for 10:30 a. m. today in an effort to get his bill before the House in time to beat adjournment. He hopes for prompt approval and consideration by the full District Committee later this week.

Should an early adjournment be indicated this week Kennedy said he will not wait for the next District day before calling up the bill in the House, providing he obtains majority support of the committee. He will ask for a special rule.

Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, who opposed provisions of the original Griffenhagen plan, declined comment on the modified measure following his return from Oklahoma yesterday.

Members of the reorganization sub-committee, besides Kennedy, are Representative McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi; Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois; Baes (Republican), of Massachusetts, and Nichols.

Cancer Council Suggests Grants For Research

The National Advisory Cancer Council yesterday recommended grants-in-aid to the New York Hospital, the University of Rochester, Dr. John J. Bittner, of the Jackson Memorial Laboratory of Bar Harbor, Me., and Barnard Free Skin and Cancer Hospital of St. Louis.

The grants are for special cancer research projects and bring the total of the National Cancer Institute's grants-in-aid to approximately $180,000.

The recommended grant approximating $9,000 to New York Hospital is for research in the early diagnosis of gastric cancer; that to Rochester University is for a fellowship in studies relating in part to the use of radioactive phosphorus in the treatment of cancer. Dr. Bittner's grant of $6,960 would enable continuation of his research on the relation of nursing to breast cancer in mice. The proposed grant to Barnard Hospital would be used for studies relating to structure and nature of cells in cancer.

Father McEneany, Once Pastor Here, Dies at Reading

The Rev. Joseph A. McEneany, pastor of Holy Trinity Church from 1930 to 1936, died yesterday at the Jesuit Novitiate of St. Isaac Jogues, Reading, Pa. He was 71.

In his long priesthood, Father McEneany served at the Theological and Philosophical Seminary, Woodstock, Md.; St. Ignatius Church, Baltimore; St. Peter's College; the Novitiate of St. Andrew-on-Hudson, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and Boston College.

He was several years president of Loyola College, Baltimore.

Lone Living Survivor of Monocacy Cheered At Rites on Eve of Battle of Fort Stevens

Behind the restored battlements of Fort Stevens a Union soldier sat at sunset last night with the ghosts of the men who forced a Confederate army away from the Capital.

His eyes had the look in them of a man whose mind could only dwell on the bruising times of three-quarters of a century ago, as, gripping a cane, he hauled himself to his feet to make a speech to the living assembly before him.

"I cannot forget," he said, "that it was just 75 years ago yesterday, and there were 8,000 of us who held back 23,000 Confederate soldiers, which were soldiers indeed."

He added, almost apologetically, "I'm a little weak, but I'm doing the best I can."

The man was 92-year-old John T. Ryan, only living survivor of the body of Union troops who on July 9, 1864, so delayed the enemy at Monocacy, a few miles south of Frederick, Md., that the Union was given time to muster a force sufficient to stop Gen. Jubal Early's Confederates at Fort Stevens two days later.

Veteran Loudly Cheered

His words went out in a strong voice to the gathering that had come to commemorate the battle of Fort Stevens on the eve of its 75th anniversary.

His words were heard by the group which included the Ladies of the G. A. R., Department of Potomac, who with their husbands and sons and the Drum and Bugle Corps of the Fort Stevens Post of the American Legion were making their annual pilgrimage to the battle shrine. But they produced a cheer that must have made a din even in his ears, dulled by years and the roar of cannon.

Earlier, members of the department had marched with their flags to stand in a row behind the natural stone monument that marks the spot on the earthworks where President Lincoln stood in the line of enemy fire. There they had sung the "Battle Hymn of the Republic."

Representative Jennings Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee, made the principal address, finding glowing words of tribute for "those who gave of themselves willingly that this Republic might live," for "brothers who fought brothers."

Lying Tongues in America

Randolph then spoke of "alien influences." "There are lying tongues abroad in America tonight," he warned. "We must square our shoulders in a time like this. America needs men these days who will step up and say they stand for Americanism and—if necessary—are ready to fight for Americanism."

Mrs. Margaret Hopkins Worrell read a poem based on the Fort Stevens Battle. Mrs. Lucille Tamm, department president, whose 3-year-old grandson, Edward Tamm, was brought to the service, laid a wreath at the monument.

Mrs. Walter J. Hausman, department patriotic instructor, was mistress of ceremonies.

Youth Council Hits Hazen's Plan to Open Playgrounds

The Washington Youth Council last night opposed use of untrained volunteers in reopening District playgrounds, proposing instead that the District find some way to hire skilled directors.

Pointing out that the WPA has trained a number of men and women for recreation direction, the council declared Commissioner Hazen's plan to reopen the playgrounds would displace workers who needed the jobs.

It was announced that the council would send representatives tomorrow and Wednesday to members of the House and Senate Foreign Affairs Committee, urging them to support legislation to embargo aggressor nations.

'YW' Given $60 On Tax Appeal

The Board of Tax Appeals yesterday awarded the Y. W. C. A. a refund of $60 out of a total of $1,460 in business privilege taxes paid under protest during the fiscal year 1938-39.

Proceeds of two cafeterias, a tea room and rental of rooms at the main building, Seventeenth and K streets northwest, are subject to tax, the board ruled, but classified the rooming house for transient girls, 614 E street northwest, as an exempt charitable enterprise.

Auto Driver Released on Bond in Death

Richard G. A. Heinrich, 34, of 20 Kentucky avenue, was released on bond yesterday after a coroner's jury had ordered him held for Police Court action under the negligent homicide act in the death of Raymond O. Temple.

Young Temple, 14, of 1517 U street northwest, was fatally injured Wednesday when he was struck down by Heinrich's auto at Good Hope and Naylor roads southeast.

Julian Wright, 60, of Riverdale, Md., suffered a severe head injury yesterday when his midget auto crashed into a truck at Riverdale.

Margaret J. Rae, 26, of 2124 I street northwest, was treated at Emergency for abrasions after she was struck by a street car in the 1100 block of F street northwest.

Fulton A. Parker Funeral Held

Services were held yesterday for Fulton A. Parker, 70, retired Powhatan County (Va.) farmer, who died Friday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Ella Bradley, of 1764 Corcoran street northwest.

Surviving, besides Mrs. Bradley, are four other daughters, Mrs. Mattie P. Bradley, Mrs. Lucy P. Turner, Mrs. Eva P. Bradley, all of Washington, and Mrs. Lesley Finney, of New York, and two sons, Alexander and Calvin Parker, of Washington.

Auto Gases Cause Headaches, G.W. Doctor Tells W.Va. Body

Dwellers in steam-heated city apartments and pedestrians along traffic-clogged urban thoroughfares are exposing themselves to either sinus trouble or a splitting headache, the West Virginia State Medical Society meeting was told yesterday.

Dr. William T. Davis, a member of the faculty of the George Washington University School of Medicine, gave carbon monoxide gas inhaled from passing autos as one cause of headaches, the Associated Press reported from convention headquarters at White Sulphur, W. Va.

Davis, who urged complete examination of headache sufferers rather than a check on their eyes, listed too much or too little light as another headache cause.

Steam heat "keeps the lining of the sinus congested, providing a fertile soil for bacterial growth," Dr. E. C. Mitchell, of Memphis, said in a prepared paper.

GHA Won't Fight New Health Plan

Officers Believe Medical Society's Service Is Guided By Liberal Doctors

Indications that the Group Health Association, Government employes' co-operative medical care organization, will not battle the new Mutual Health Service, sponsored by the District Medical Society, were seen last night when the G. H. A.'s directing board met for the first time since the second low-cost medical plan was launched.

It was learned that scarcely any mention was made of the Medical Society's service, and that G. H. A. officers believe the Mutual Health Service program represents the efforts of more liberal Washington doctors to meet the obligations which originally gave rise to the Federal employes' clinic.

Groups Held Noncompetitive

A participant in the meeting said G. H. A. did not beliece that the two organizations would compete for clients since the average Government employe's salary of $2,050 would place him above the M. H. S. minimum. He estimated that two-thirds of G. H. A. members earned salaries of sufficient size to place them above the group which M. H. S. will accept for treatment.

He emphasized that there was no criticism voiced at the meeting of the doctors' program, and that G. H. A. had not intention or excuse to launch a "smear" campaign against it. On the contrary, he intimated, the M. H. S. represented such a disirable development that G. H. A. officials, who believe the doctors' plan established as a reply to their own organization, took pride in the accomplishment.

Financial reports made to the meeting showed that G. H. A. was "about breaking even" on a cash basis, although still "in the red" from a bookkeeping viewpoint which takes into account write-offs for depreciation.

Laboratory Space Needed

Other developments reported were the necessity of the G. H. A. clinic seeking additional laboratory space in some other building; the absence of any elective operative cases awaiting action, and a gradually increasing membership.

A suggestion was made that the G. H. A. reduce fees to bring them closer to the M. H. S. rates, by abandoning the hospitalization now accorded to members, who would thus be required to join some hospital insurance organization. The suggestion was not discussed at length.

Haworth Seeks Sponsors for WPA Projects

Assistant WPA Administrator Ross Haworth yesterday said he is compiling a reference and statistical summary of federally sponsored WPA projects here for use in soliciting local sponsorship to continue beyond their July 31 expiration date.

The Federal projects—arts, music, writers and historical records survey—employ about 260. The local WPA office has been given one month to find other sponsorship for them, or abandon them, Haworth said.

Sponsorship entails supplying funds for all nonlabor expenses, such as office rent, equipment and supplies. The sponsors' contributions would average about 25 per cent of the total cost. Sponsors must be some tax-supported institution, such as the District government, but there may be cosponsors of private organizations or individuals.

Shute Refuses "Bribe" to Quit P.G.A. Play

The Washington Post Sports

16 WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, JULY 11, 1939 X*

Four Players Tied at 138 For Medal

Committee Offered Shute $300, Report; Hogan, Harrison Are Among Leaders

By Bob Considine.

Flushing, N. Y., July 10.—Amidst the wildest scenes in the history of American golf, the crack field in the $15,000 P. G. A. championship tournament completed its 36-hole qualifying test late today at Pomonok County Club, after civil war had broken out among the pros, Sam Snead had failed to qualify, and the club had threatened to kick the tournament off the premises.

Out of a day of bruised feelings, near fisticuffs, and a report that the executive committee of the P. G. A. had offered Denny Shute a $300 "bribe" to retire from the tournament, staggered 64 qualified players. Tomorrow they will be paired and begin the long process of elimination under the match play system. The final round is scheduled for Saturday.

Four players tied for the medal, after shooting 36 qualifying holes in 138 knocks, which is six under par for the short, tricky Pomonok course. They were Ben Hogan and Ky Laffoon, transplanted Texans who now teach in White Plains, N. Y., and Chicago, respectively; Dutch Harrison, of Oakmont, Ill., and Emerick Kocsis, of Orion, Mich.

Mangrum Close Behind

Behind them, by dint of a great final round of 66 for the par 72 course, came Ray Mangrum, Oakmont, Pa., with 139. One stroke behind, at 140, finished Gene Sarazen, Dick Metz, Henry Picard, Al Watrous, Charles Schneider (whose 68 included an eagle) and Al Brosch. Ralph Guldahl and Horton Smith finished with 141s, 9 were clocked with 142, and 11 had 143s, including Shute, source of all the internal discord within the ranks of the pros.

Sam Snead finished with a miserable 149, 1 shot too many to put him among the fortunate 64 wre begin the real section of the tournament tomorrow. Jimmy Hines and Joe Turnesa also failed to qualify, but Walter Hagen, who played in the first P. G. A. tournament in 1916, got in by shooting a great 41 on his outgoing nine.

Jacobus Overrules Vote

The long-stewing trouble over the Shute case reached the boiling point late this afternoon when Tom Walsh, a member of the P. G. A. executive committee which sought to keep Shute out of the tournament because he was two days late with his $25 P. G. A. dues, came out of a heated conference with George Jacobus, president of the pro association, and announced that Shute would not be allowed to continue play tomorrow.

Jacobus immediately announced that Shute would indeed play, and that he, Jacobus, had "overruled" the executive committee. An announcement to this effect was made

Mamakos Wins T.K.O. in 5th Over Wakerlis

By Al Hailey

Steve Mamakos, Washington's fifth ranking welterweight, punched his way to a technical knockout over Dem Wakerlis, Boston, in one minute of the fifth round of their 10-round bout last night at Griffith Stadium. Mamakos weighed 148 pounds; Wakerlis 151.

Wakerlis, substituting for Frankie Blair, who pulled out at the last minute, had given Steve a tough time of it for the first four rounds, when Trainer Matty Norton leaped into the ring with a towel as Mamakos opened a bad gash over Dem's right eye.

Norton's dramatic leap through the ropes came after Steve had backed Wakerlis into the ropes and was pounding him with a series of solid rights. The Athens-born Greek's defense had dropped and his knees and were beginning to sag as he attempted to escape the deluge.

Fans Leave Happy

The fans, who showed unusual enthusiasm in the proceedings while Wakerlis was giving Mamakos a beating in the early rounds, were satified with the technical knockout decision and gave both boys a big hand at the end.

Members of the District Boxing Commission, however, were highly displeased with Norton's unethical leap into the ring and after a brief executive session ordered him suspended from appearances in the 47 National Boxing Association affiliated States for 60 days. The suspension is also effective in New York, under the N. B. A.'s working

Odds Drop on Americans in All-Star Game

TO THE RIGHT—

... throw all three of the American League's pitching hopes in the All-Star game in New York today. Overwhelming favorites to blot out their rivals of the older circuit are Charles ("Red") Ruffing (right), mainstay of the Yanks, who will pitch the first three innings; Tommy Bridges (below, right), who is scheduled to bring his Tiger uniform to the mound for the second three, and Bobby Feller, who will bring his Cleveland fireball into the game in the seventh—if all goes well

Derringer And Ruffing Will Start

Recent Yank Losses Seen as Phychological Aid to Nationals; Betting Is 8 to 5

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

New York, July 10.—This little coast town of 7,000,000 souls tucked away between parallel rivers will march 60,000 strong to Yankee Stadium tomorrow afternoon to stargaze.

Because the stars will be out—the stars of the baseball firmament, 50 of them, wearing uniforms of every club in the American and National Leagues. And at 2 p. m., a white-maned old gentleman, who will be Kenesaw Mountain Landis, will raise his arm aloft, flip a new ball onto the field, and send into action the casts in the seventh annual All-Star game betyeen the two leagues.

And American League hopes will be riding chiefly with the half-dozen Yankees who will be in the league's starting line-up against the hand-picked crop of National Leaguers. Except for first-base, shortstop and right field, every post on the American League team will be manned by one of the league-leading Yankees.

Sharp Drop in Odds

Despite the presence of the six Yankees in the starting line-up—or perhaps because of them—there has been a sharp drop in the betting odds which were favoring the American League at 2 to 1. Five straight defeats handed the Yankees by the Red Sox over the week-end are interpreted as a terrific psychological lift to the National League and Broadway betting men were offering no more than 8 to 5 on an American League triumph tomorrow.

At 2 o'clock, when the two teams take the field, it will be:

Ruffing vs. Derringer.

Identical Records

Ruffing will be meeting up with a National League hurler, in big Paul Derringer, a chap who can boast a record of 11 victories against 3 defeats this season, a figure identical with Ruffing's. Identical also are the two starting pitchers in that both are mountainous, 200-ponnd right-handers.

The complete line-ups as announced by Managers McCarthy and Gabby Hartnett, World Series foes of 1938, who are meeting again as master minds in opposite dug-outs are:

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

New York, July 10.—More the pity is it that New York is the scene of the All-Star game where it is absorbed like another convention of Eastern Branch managers and creates not even a ripple on the surface of bustling Manhattan. Here the game that is supposed to fire the imagination of fandom, is lost in the swirling vortex of life in New York.

POVICH

Sure, there'll be 60,000 folks at Yankee Stadium tomorrow afternoon, but New York tonight isn't Cincinnati on All-Star eve, or Washington or Cleveland where it was the topic of the day. Save in the two hotels where the National and American League stars are quartered, there is no pregame dither. Streams of sign-carriers are still picketing the automats, the cloak and suit trade is completely unexcited, and the 2-cent State tax on cigarettes is still the transcendent topic.

The 60,000 who'll be there tomorrow may be large as baseball crowds go, but it will be a very modest turn-out for New York at the game which is supposed to be the ne plus ultra in baseball entertainment, at prices that have not been hiked above regular league games. Cleveland, with one-seventh the population of New York, marched 65,000 strong to its All-Star game in 1935, and Washington, in 1937, with one-tenth the populace of Gotham, produced more than 31,000 fans.

Slump of Yankees Is Chief Topic

Even where baseball men have gathered tonight, the 1939 All-Star game isn't the chief topic. What baseball men are talking about is the shocking slump of the Yankees, beaten five straight by the Boston Red Sox on their home grounds. It has put a new face on the American League pennant race and the buzzing is best described as terrific.

Few baseball men are agreeing with Clark Griffith, inveterate Yankee hater, that the Yankees are shot. But all agree that the Red Sox's five-straight triumphs were the best thing that has happened to the American League in the past four years.

A month ago, at Cooperstown, N. Y., Griffith predicted that the Yankees would be "through" by August 1. "They can't keep up their pace," said the Nats' owner. "It's too fast. They're bound to crack. A good team will come along and beat them out for the pennant and I think it will be the Red Sox."

The Yankees are still six and one-half games in the lead, a margin that usually would be described as commanding, but recent events have proved Griffith to be something of an oracle. Because no more recently than a week ago, the Yankees' lead had burgeoned to 12 games and the person who dared to predict then that they would be given any kind of a battle for the pennant would straightway have been commited to a strait-jacket.

Mr. Tom Yawkey, owner of the Red Sox, was smiling broadly around baseball headquarters tonight. He has new ideas about the pennant race. "The league owes us a lasting debt of gratitude," Yawkey was saying. "We showed that the Yankees could be beaten by a team that would stand up and fight 'em. Now if some of those other clubs will only take the tip, we'll have a nice race yet."

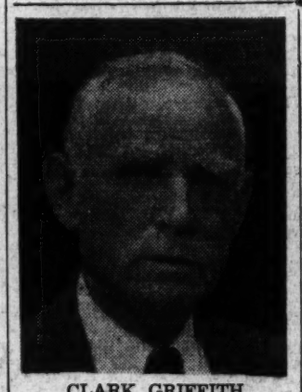
Cronin Sees Tigers as League Hope

Joe Cronin, no less pleased with the turn of events that has put his club within hailing distance of the Yanks, hoped also that other clubs would take the tip. "The best thing we did," said Cronin, "is to shoot the talk of the Yanks' invincibility full of holes. The Detroit Tigers are in a great spot to help the whole league now. They meet the Yankees next, and if they can take a couple of games from 'em, it might convince the Yanks, themselves, that it is tough to win."

"Against us, the Yankees played a lot of bad baseball," added Cronin, "and the last game we won was a gift. But that's the way the Yankees have been winning a lot of games, too. Clubs tighten up against 'em, and throw a lot of runs their way on bad plays. Now the Yanks know how it feels to lose that way."

LOBBYING . . . Buck Newsom held court for fans in the New Yorker lobby this morning, signing autographs and predicting he'd shut out the National Leaguers if he got a chance to pitch tomorrow . . . Newsom reported that in the recent Tigers-White Sox fuss after Joe Kuhel spiked Hank Greenberg, Greenberg walked into the White Sox dressing room and challenged any of the Sox, declaring, "I want you first, Dykes, and you next, Kuhel" . . . Nobody accepted . . . Zeke Bonura was no little miffed by the fact that he was left off the National League All-Star team despite the fact he is out-hitting every first baseman in the league . . . Judge Landis suddenly decided that tomorrow's game would start at 2 p. m., despite the fact that all tickets announce that it will begin at 1:30 . . . The National Association of Professional Ball Players will profit to the extent of $40,000 after expenses for the game are deducted . . . St. Louis, the poorest baseball town in the big leagues, will be the scene of the 1940 All-Star game . . . Lou Gehrig, as honorary captain of the American Leaguers, hopes that he will not have to meet the ordeal of an introduction at home plate . . . Gehrig and Charley Gehringer will not play in the game for the first time since the contest was inaugurated in 1933 . . . One bet made today, at odds of 10 to 1, was that Mel Ott would be the first player to hit a home run tomorrow . . . When Bill Lee, of the Cubs, takes the mound for the N. L., the American League team will look suspiciously like the Yankee club that walloped him in the 1938 World Series . . . Joe McCarthy's plan of reserving Bob Feller as his last pitcher of the day is obvious . . . Batters are never as sharp in the late innings, when Feller's speed will be most effective.

Griffith Is Elected A. L. Vice-President



CLARK GRIFFITH

Nats' President Will Succeed Late Col. Jake Ruppert

A Staff Correspondent.

New York, July 10.—President of the Washington Ball Club and Vice President of the American League.

That is the new title belonging to Clark C. Griffith, owner of the Nats, following his election to day to the second highest office of the American League as the successor to the late Col. Jacob Ruppert.

He will fill the unexpired term of Col. Ruppert, and at the annual meeting in December will be re-elected, according to American League custom.

The 69-year-old owner of the Nats becomes the fourth vice president in American League history. The only men to hold the office before Griffith have been Charles Comiskey, Frank Navin and Ruppert.

His elevation to the vice presidency follows by nearly 40 years Griffith's active part in the founding of the American League in 1901, when he with Charles Comiskey and the late Ban Johnson, successfully defied the National League in the formation of a new major circuit.

National Club Owners Ignore MacPhail Blast

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 10.—The National League's board of directors today took just enough notice of the "blast" issued last week by President Larry MacPhail, of Brooklyn, against the New York Giants and League President Ford C. Frick to pass it off without taking any action.

The directors, with MacPhail absent from the meeting, issued a statement approving Frick's action on MacPhail's charges. That action, so far as is publicly known, was to ignore the whole affair.

MacPhail's complaint arose from a scrap on the field last week between Manager Leo Durocher of the Dodgers and Zeke Bonura, Giants first baseman. They clashed at first base and Bonura, claiming Durocher had stepped on his foot, threw the ball at him then chased him into the outfield, where they had a brief fistic engagement. Frick fined both for the outburst.

The Brooklyn president then issued a statement in which he scored Frick for fining Durocher and accused Bill Terry, the Giants manager, of trying to intimidate umpires and to "run the league." He said he was calling it to the attention of the board of directors.

Frick, however, refused to make any formal reply in the absence of a formal complaint to him, and the principal result of the "blast" was to bring capacity crowds to Ebbett Field Friday and Saturday when the Giants and Dodgers met again.

Dodgers Win

Albany, N. Y., July 10.—The Brooklyn Dodgers pounded two Albany twirlers for 14 hits tonight to win an exhibition baseball game from the Albany Senators of the Eastern League, 13 to 6.

Turk Edwards, Redskin Captain, To Play After All

Reports that Turk Edwards, veteran captain of the Washington Redskins, plans to give up professional football were checked yesterday when Redskin officials announced they had been notified that their ace tackle is "fully planning to return to the lineup this fall."

EDWARDS

Edwards' announcement that he intends to continue playing was received through a questionnaire sent out in order to facilitate transportation of players to the Spokane, Wash., training quarters, Jack Espy, general manager, said.

Selected as All-League tackle four times in the seven years he has been with the Redskins, Edwards is now a salesman in Auburn, Calif., Espy said. Turk wrote the Skins' office that he has not received his 1939 contract but that "if and when I do, and it is satisfactory, I will collect my transportation when I arrive in camp."

Salesman Shoots 162 Holes to Win $10 and Set Mark

Miami Beach, Fla., July 10 (U.P.)—Curtis Jarvis, slight, 29-year-old salesman, today shot 162 successive holes of golf over a rain-soaked course to collect a $10 wager and better a marathon mark of 144 holes set last year by Smith Ferebee, Chicago broker.

Jarvis, boyhood friend of Ferebee, began his first 18-hole round at the Miami Beach Golf Club at 5:14 a. m., and, completed his ninth trip around the par 71 layout at 7 p. m.

His scores for the nine rounds were 77, 75, 79, 76, 80, 78, 79, 75 and 76. The $10 wager, made with Gene Groover, Miami Beach druggist, provided that Jarvis must better 85 each round.

Tru-Blu Softballers Beat Standards, 4 to 1

Tru-Blu's softball team scored a 4-1 victory over the Bureau of Standards in a Community Center Softball League game in Roosevelt Stadium last night.

Marathon Golfer Shoots Par Three Here on 14th Stop

Guy Price, jr., the University of Southern California golfer, stopped at Washington Golf and Country Club long enough to score a par 3 on the fourteenth hole yesterday afternoon and remain 3 over par for the first 14 stops of his cross-country trek. Price started his trip on the first hole of the Los Angeles Country Club.

Five over par for the first 11 stops, he birdied the twelfth hole of the Carolina Country Club in Raleigh, Saturday, and added another birdie Sunday on the thirteenth hole of the Country Club of Virginia course.

Price plans to continue tomorrow in Baltimore, then play in Philadelphia, Newark and conclude his trip Wednesday at Fresh Meadow in New York.

The originator of the latest craze in golf, even later than the hole-in-1 marathon, stopped in the golf shop at Washington, asked the length of the hole, that measures 234 yards, and took a driver, spoon and putter to the tea.

Len Harvey Beats Jock McAvoy In 'Title' Bout Before 90,000

By the Associated Press.

London, July 10.—Len Harvey, British and empire light-heavyweight champion, won a 15-round decision over Jock McAvoy tonight in a bout billed as being for the world light-heavyweight championship.

A crowd of 90,000 at White City Stadium saw Harvey finish strongly to take the decision after being floored for a count of one in the second round.

After surviving a terrific beating in the fourteenth round, Harvey caught McAvoy in his corner in the final round and beat him badly with a series of hard right crosses. The champion was wobbling in the fourteenth and only his big weight advantage enabled him to score so heavily in the fifteenth.

The bout was designated as a world title affair after John Henry Lewis was refused permission to fight Harvey because of his failing eyesight and the British boxing board of control decided it would no longer recognize Lewis as world champion.

After the championship bout, Eddie Phillips, 189½, knocked out Jack Doyle, 218¼, the Irish boxer-singer in the first round. Phillips flattened Doyle with a hard right cross to the jaw. Earlier in the round, Doyle knocked Phillips down for a count of one with a quick right hook and pushed him down a second time.

Case to Be Used As Pinch-Runner If Needed Today

New York, July 10.—George Washington Case, the Nats' only representative on the American League All-Star squad, is fated to play only a pinch-running role in tomorrow's game at Yankee Stadium.

Omitted from the starting lineup by Manager Joe McCarthy, despite the fact he is out-hitting two of the three outfielders named, Case's base-stealing prowess may yet open the door to action for him.

"He'll be my first choice if I need a pinch-runner," said McCarthy of Case today. "And I'd like to get the chance to turn him loose."

Stonebraker, Ex-Terp, Goes to Kansas City

Hagerstown, July 10.—Jack Stonebraker, former University of Maryland athlete, who has been playing shortstop for the Norfolk, Va., Baseball Club, has been ordered to report to the Kansas City Club.

Italy, Canada and U. S. Drivers Primed for Cup Regatta

Plans Near Completion For Event

Seven Boats Under Construction; 150 In Sailing Races; 80 Swimming Entries

By Ken Harter.

At least seven racing craft are being made ready for Gold Cup competition this summer, and it is expected that all of these potential record breakers will start in the President's Cup race which will feature the annual regatta here on the Potomac in September.

Italy, Canada and the United States will have a three-cornered battle for the President's trophy. Count Theo Rossi, the Italian champion, who set a record here last year in his Alagi, has already notified the race committee of his intention to enter the race. And it is believed that he will have as his running mate a fellow countryman, Gudio Cattaneo, who will also drive one of Rossi's boats.

Rossi's Chief Rival

Foremost among the other contenders will be E. A. Wilson, of Ingersoll, Ont., with Miss Canada III, driven by Wilson's son, Harold. Miss Canada did not compete in the race here last year because of motor trouble which developed during the Gold Cup race in Detroit the week before.

The other four prospects are American craft. Two of them, Herb Mendelson's Notre Dame and Zalmon Simmons' My Sin, were built last year but never got to the starting line. Notre Dame overturned in a trial run a few days prior to the Detroit race and My Sin's motor was not made ready in time.

Notre Dame retains the same speed possibilities that Mendelson had hoped for last year, and Simmons, Greenwich, Conn., sportsman, has had My Sin's motor tuned until the boat is in proper order.

Four Motors Sold

Since the minimum cubic inch piston displacement has been reduced this year from 625 to 366 cubic inches, it is believed several more boats will be completed before September. It is known that the Lycoming company has sold four complete sets of motors and equipment in the past few weeks.

But this race will be only one of the events which will include sailing, outboatboard races, other types of inboard events and illuminated water carnival and swimming events, it was pointed out yesterday at the President's Cup Regatta luncheon held in the Harrington Hotel.

Regarded as the outstanding entry in the 135-cubic inch class is Andy Crawford, Washington driver, who recently won the events in the Baltimore and Hampton regattas. Jack Hyde, another Washington driver, who closely pressed Crawford in both regattas, will also enter the President's Cup races.

Arthur Clephane reported that in the sailing races nearly 150 craft are expected to enter. Last year 118 boats crossed the starting line.

Approximately 80 entries from eight different swimming clubs throughout the East will compete in the swimming events to be held at the Shoreham on September 16. The clubs sending entries include: Women's Swimming Association of New York; St. George Dragon Club of Brooklyn; Newark Women's A. C. of Newark, N. J.; Penn A. C. of Philadelphia; Knights of Columbus and Y. M. C. A. of Baltimore; Goldsboro Swimming Association of Goldsboro, N. C., and all the District clubs.

Regatta Notes

Harold Allen Long, chairman of the sponsors' committee, announced that plans are complete for the regatta's royal moonlight sail July 26 on the Wilson steamer, City of Washington. Novel features will include an old custom deck show, searchlight tattoo, carnival festivities and several surprise features Melvin C. Hazen, president of the District Commissioners, sent his regrets because he was unable to be a guest at the luncheon yesterday.

Johnny Bramble in Pep IV and Dr. Robinson's Miss Syracuse will be entered in K class competition at the regatta.

Chrissic III, owned by George Schraft, son of the candy manufacturer, was clocked unofficially at 93 M. P. H. in a recent test. Schraft will enter his boat in the "225" class, which will include such drivers as Veteran Jack Cooper, of Kansas City, who won the 225-inch hydroplane championship at Lake Hopatcong, in New Jersey, Sunday.

Regatta committee appointments made recently include Gen. Albert L. Cox, chairman of membership committee; Thomas P. Morgan, jr., chairman of promotion committee; J. A. Anadale, chairman of scorers' committee, and Andrew Duffy, chairman of starters' committee.

Chicago Lads Give Refined Rendition of 'The Bird' to Detroit's Buck Newsom

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

"So nice to have bumped into you, Mr. Newsom," chortle the White Sox in sarcastic unison to Buck Newsom (No. 12), Tiger pitcher, after they "bumped" him for so many hits in Sunday's doubleheader in Chicago that he retired in the ninth inning. The Sox staged the farewell party in retaliation for one the Tigers staged recently when Manager Jimmy Dykes was ejected from a game in Detroit. The Sox took both games, 4-3, 6-3 to a cluster of golf fans standing in front of the clubhouse and a cheer went up, but it was almost drowned out by Walsh's loud assertions that Jacobus had no authority to declare Shute in.

Meanwhile, and while the argument between the pro-Shutes and the anti-Shutes roared toward its sweaty conclusion, a delegation of members from the Pomonok Club informed the meeting that unless it decided the Shute case immediately the club would kick the tournament off its course. Cork O'Keefe, who bought the tournament from the P. G. A. for $15,000, also made preliminary plans to enter suit against the association if Shute is dropped and the leading players keep their promise to boycott the event in such an emergency.

Gene Sarazen revealed earlier in the day that the anti-Shute element of the P. G. A. executive committee had offered the player $300 to retire at the tenth hole of his qualifying round today. Shute refused. When he started on the round the committee refused to give him a score card, but Walter Hagen, his playing companion, sent back for an extra one which Shute used. Sarazen, who is in favor of starting a new professional association limited to tournament-playing pros, said he would draw up a petition calling for the resignation of Walsh, J. B. Mackie, treasurer of the P. G. A., and Tom Boyd, the association's vice president, "for attempting to bribe Shute."

While most of the blow-ups took place in the boardrooms, none was louder than the blow-up of Snead, last year's P. G. A. runner-up and a cofavorite to win the current test. He shot a lowly 79 the first day and followed it up today with a 72, which was par, but not good enough. He was so disgusted by the time he reached the eighteenth hole that he carelessly pitched his second shot into a trap and blasted it out so quickly that the caddy didn't have time to snatch the pin out of the hole as it zipped past.

Rut Coffey Among P.G.A. Qualifiers; District Pros Fail

Special Dispatch to The Post

Flushing, July 10.—Rut Coffey, Winchester, Va., Country Club professional, was the only qualifier among the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. tournament here, the stock mentor playing the course in 74 today and added to an opening 70 for a 144 total, well within the limit.

Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam pro, who knew he needed a 71 or under to qualify when he started his second round, was virtually eliminated on the first hole with a double-bogey six. He played spotty golf all the way and finished with a birdie on the 18th for his second straight 77.

Mel Shorey, whose opening day 81 was the second highest round in the tourney, rallied with a 74 but was still seven strokes over the qualifying limit of 148. Shorey started and finished the out nine with birdies for a 36 and came back in 38 for the 74.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, July 10.—It's only seven years old, but the All-Star game has become an irreplaceable part of every baseball season. The things that have happened in the six previous games have fitted perfectly into the old fabric of the sport. And the ballplayers—who were the last to accept the game's importance—are beginning to look upon it as a means of attaining a baseball immortality otherwise denied them.

CONSIDINE

Carl Hubbell pitched the New York Giants into three pennants, once won a 17-inning shutout, beat the Yankees in a World Series, threatened Walter Johnson's consecutive scoreless innings streak and in many other ways hacked out a deep niche in baseball history. But we have an idea that he will be remembered chiefly for something he did in the 1934 All-Star game—for which he wasn't paid a cent and for which deed his team gained nothing. We mean, of course, his feat of striking out Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Jimmy Foxx, Joe Cronin and Al Simmons in succession.

Jimmy Foxx will retire eventually with about 500 home runs, but one that will stand out at the top, or darn close to it, will be his blast into the leftfield pews in Cleveland, in the All-Star game of 1935. It won the game for the American League—just as Babe Ruth's long-since famous homer won the first All-Star game in 1933. The triples hit by Ben Chapman and Earl Averill in the 1934 game, after Hubbell had gone and the American League team was beginning to roll, are the most famous hits either ever made, or ever will.

DiMaggio Was the 'Goat'

As young as it is, the All-Star game packs in its compact history the story of one of the sport's most dramatic failures. Joe DiMaggio, playing his first All-Star game, let a ball roll through his legs in the Bees' ballyard, in 1936, and on that error the National League scored its first All-Star victory. He was a jittery, unhappy guy, DiMaggio was that day. The pressure was too much for a young fellow. He sagged slowly under its weight, a scared white-faced rookie who was a mass of jumpy nerves. In the end he had to cope with a fearfully bad break. He had booted in the winning runs, but in the eighth inning he came to bat with the bases filled and it was in his power to wipe out the ignominy of what had gone before. He swung savagely on a fast ball and hit the hardest line drive this observer ever saw—right into Shortstop Leo Durocher's hands.

We have an idea that Joe DiMaggio was forged and made whole that day. That disastrous afternoon didn't break the rookie's spirit, and he'll never have to face a more trying series of setbacks than he did in that All-Star game.

Curiously enough it was an All-Star game, rather than a World Series or an American League pennant race, which really demonstrated to the world the utter superiority of Yankee ballplayers. That was the 1937 game, in Washington. The American League team won 8-3. Seven of the American League team's runs were scored or driven in by Yankee players. Lefty Gomez was the game's winning pitcher. DiMaggio's superb running throw—a perfect strike from right field to Bill Dickey—throttled the one serious National League rally.

A Big Toe Had Wide Influence

Something happened in the same game that changed the course of the National League. Dizzy Dean was hit on the big toe of his left foot, during the tussle, and the injury was so painful that immediately thereafter he changed his pitching style a mite to favor his sore tootsie. The change in the style pulled something in his shoulder, sent him off to a long siege on the bench, and enabled Sam Breadon and Branch Rickey to sell him to the Cubs—without fear of a mass boycott on the part of that handful of St. Louis baseball fans. The Cubs at first found him a great lemon, but Dizz came through just at the right moment—in last September's pennant drive—and shoved the Cubs into the series. All on account of a big toe.

Maryland State Golf Association Cards 3 Events

The mixed two-ball tournament of the Maryland State Golf Association, selective drives and alternate shots, will be played tomorrow at Beaver Dam. One half of the combined handicap will be allowed.

Contestants must have 1939 Maryland State handicap cards. Play will start at 1 p. m., with merchanize prizes to the low net and gross scorers.

The association will sponsor the third Junior Open Tuesday July 17 at Roland Park, Baltimore, over the 18-hole medal route. The event is open to all boys, amateur or pro, with age classes of 15 and under and 16 and 17 in addition to the championship class. Entries close with the State Association Office, 16 McClellan place, Baltimore, July 17 at 4 p. m.

A combination amateur-pro and handicap tourney for the simonpures will be held Wednesday, July 19 at Hillendale. A pro sweepstakes for the pros and assistants will also be a part of the three-in-one tourney.

Professionals will be allowed three amateur partners.

Mid-Atlantic P.G.A. Tourney To Local Club

Al Houghton to Promote Event Diffenbaugh Wins

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, July 10.—The Middle Atlantic P. G. A. championship will be played in Washington some time before October 1, the executive committee decided at a meeting here last night at the Suburban Club.

Al Houghton, who promoted the 1937 and '38 tournaments at Old Point Comfort, Va., both won by Leo Walper, has a plan to raise a purse for the tournament and is expected to work out the details in the near future. Should Houghton's plan fall through, the tournament will be held in the Capital, regardless, for the first time in several years.

District Vice President Robert T. Barnett, Chevy Chase pro, will work on the plan with Houghton, now an unattached professional.

The tournament will be played at 72 holes, medal play, as in the past two years. Before Houghton took the event to Old Point, where he served as pro, it was played over the match play route.

The course and dates are undecided, but President Ralph Beach indicated the tournament would probably be played in September. Houghton, who has promoted the National Capital Open here, in addition to the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. and other events, has an advertising plan back of the tourney.

George Diffenbaugh, Kenwood Club professional, won the pro sweepstakes and tied with Mrs. C. W. Wilhide as a partner in the pro-lady tournament.

Diffenbaugh played the par 70 course in 68 strokes, with a pair of 34's. He and Mrs. Wilhide had a 148 total, Diffenbaugh's 68 and a net 80 for his Baltimore Country Club partner.

Ralph Beach, host pro, was second in the sweeps with a 70, and tied with M. Louise Bell as a partner, with 148, while Alec Taylor, Rolling Road pro, and Regina Downey also had 148, Taylor with 75 and his partner a net 73.

Bejma Goes Wild As Home Folks Give Him 'Day'

South Bend, Ind., July 10 (AP).—This was Ollie Bejma's day and he made the most of it.

The little Chicago second baseman who formerly lived here slammed out a three-run homer, a double and a single in five trips to the plate as the White Sox defeated the Studebaker Athletics, 9 to 4, in an exhibition game.

Bill Dietrich, starting pitcher, and Jess Dobernic, tossed shutout ball for eight innings. Then Manager Jimmy Dykes took over and the fun started. The locals scored all their runs off Dykes, one a home run inside the park.

Jack Hader Meets Powers in Prelim On Mat Program

Jack Hader, who has forsaken his villainous wrestling habits over the violent protests of Promoter Joe Turner, will face Ernie Powers on Thursday night at Turner's Arena in a 30-minute preliminary on the Nanjo Singh-Laverne Baxter, Jim Clinstock-Bibber McCoy double-header.

The card develops as an all-revenge affair. Baxter is seeking vengeance on Singh, who two weeks ago disposed of him with his "cobra clutch;" Clinstock is seeking to avenge his recent upset by Bibber, and Hader is seeking revenge on general principles against Powers.

Hagerstown Opens Maryland Half-Mile Race Season Today

Nearby Oval Turf Scene For 10 Days

Track Now Boasts Clubhouse; Stands Have Been Rebuilt; Seven Races Daily

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent.

Hagerstown, Md., July 10.—Half-mile racing, a fast-growing cog in Maryland's turf machine, will make its first 1939 stand tomorrow at the homey track of the Hagerstown Fair Association here. From the moment that the starter touches the bell to send a field of 2-year-olds scampering toward purse money at 2:30 p. m. until sundown on September 14 at Timonium, the banktails will hold sway on the 4-furlong courses where greenbacks are just as valuable as at Pimlico, Laurel or Saratoga.

There isn't a Johnstown or a Challedon in a carload of the horses awaiting action here, but they have a way of coming down to the wire fighting for ground and its just as easy to tear up a handkerchief, bite a nail or shout ones self hoarse here as it is at Churchill Downs on Derby Day.

Clubhouse New Feature

Hagerstown is brushed up for the meeting and the racing plant is as clean as a Dutch women's kitchen. For the first time, the track can offer something along the "ritz" lines. It has a brand-new clubhouse. In addition, the stands have been rebuilt and white and green paint has been used freely. Of course the mountain background has not been altered.

Harold Bester, whose father, the late Harry E. Bester, revived racing here ten years ago, has done a good job of getting the track ready. He has installed the Jones Camera and all finishes will be photographed whether or not the judges need the pictures to aid in placing the horses.

As usual, there will be a daily double. Under the Maryland racing rules, all winners and any horses designated by the stewards will be given silliva tests.

Brennan on Hand

Racing Secretary Eddie Brennan has arranged a good book for the meeting. As was the case at Charles Town, horses are plentiful and Brennan had little trouble arranging the first day's program. He made the card with a variety of events, from 5-furlong sprints to distance affairs.

Racing here runs through until Saturday. Monday, as usual, will be an off day. The following Tuesday, the sport will be resumed to be concluded with the week-end program. Following Hagerstown, the half-mile season shifts to Bel Air from July 26 to August 5. Cumberland follows with dates from August 8 to 19. Marlboro opens August 22 and closes September 2. Timonium will hold sway from September 4 to 14.

If you're interested, Havre de Grace opens the milers on September 18.

SAVANT went to the front in the opening stages, shook off WHITE TOPPER after leaving the backstretch, opened up a good lead and, hard ridden at the end, was never seriously threatened. CROSS OVER had early speed, dropped back after rounding the far turn, moved up when reaching the stretch and finished with good energy. CANTAMORE was forced to thread his way through the field and finished willingly in the closing drive.

Daily Double, High Treason and Savant, Paid $127.20.

GUYENCOURT moved up gradually after straightening out on the backstretch, went to the leader nearing the stretch, was carried wide by LATE PASS and, fighting it out courageously the entire length of the stretch, was along in the closing stride. LATE PASS had speed from the start, was taken under slight reserve when ARBOREAL went past to set the pace, fought it out in courageous fashion when challenged and just failed to last. EYE HIGH bettered her position gradually during the last three furlongs.

FOURTH RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For maiden 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:55. Off at 3:58. Winner, Tranquility Farm's br. f. (2), by Salve Ship—Feu Bar. Two-dollar mutuels paid—IRON BAR, $30.60, $10.60, $5.80; POLINA, $5.40, $4.20; MINORCA, $9.60.

IRON BAR was slow to begin and, outrun early, came to the outside when reaching the stretch and, closing with a rush, bore in when moving to the front and forced POLINA to take up slightly, increasing her advantage in the closing strides. POLINA was forwardly placed all the way, disposed of ALZURA, gained the lead in the stretch and held on willingly to the end. Fels lodged a claim of foul against the winner when was not allowed. MINORCA, forced to take back nearing the far turn when in close quarters, recovered gamely, but was unable to reach the leaders. POLLY PORTER was away slowly and was taken in hand when in close quarters and was unable to recover.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CARDELL, $43.40, $12.40, $5.00; ABRASION, $5.00, $3.00; THIRD COVEY, $3.00.

CARDELL was steadied along in back of the leaders early, began working his way forwardly during the last five-sixteenths mile, came to the outside of ABRASION when reaching the stretch and was along inside the last sixteenth. ABRASION had speed from the start, disposed of EXARCH and while holding on willingly was not quite good enough. THIRD COVEY, unable to enter into contention during the first 3 furlongs, came stoutly in the closing sixteenths.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200; allowances. For 3-year-olds and upward, fillies and mares. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:57. Off at 4:57½. Winner, W. C. Two-dollar mutuels paid—KENTY MISS, $6.20, $3.00, $2.20; MERRY GESTURE, $3.20, $2.20; EVENING SHADOW, $2.40.

KENTY MISS, under slight restraint for the first 3 furlongs while avoiding the early pace, came to the outside when reaching the stretch, responded gamely to pressure, wore down MERRY GESTURE and was increasing her advantage at the close. MERRY GESTURE had speed from the outset, disposed of EVENING SHADOW for the lead and, while holding on gamely, was no match for the winner in the closing drive. EVENING SHADOW, hard hustled while disputing the pace, was unable to keep up with the leader after the first 3 furlongs.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LAST SCAMP, $20.40, $11.80, $6.20; BRASS MONKEY, $8.20, $4.00; HARPEN BELLE, $3.00.

LAST SCAMP was permitted to settle into her best stride and was not hurried during the early stages, began bettering her position midway down the backstretch, disposed of HARPEN BELLE for the lead when reaching the stretch and, hard ridden, drew out in the last furlong. BRASS MONKEY, as usual, was slow to begin, worked his way up steadily in the last half mile and closed willingly. HARPEN BELLE had speed from the start, was rated along in front, but was unable to maintain her advantage through the stretch run.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 5:57. Off at 5:58½. Winner, Mrs. E. Denemark's br. h. KENYON C. was shuffled back nearing the far turn, was taken back and went to the outside, moved to the leaders steadily and, taking the lead in the stretch, drew out through the last three-sixteenths. ODDESA FRANK, unable to keep pace early, closed strongly through the stretch, getting up in the concluding stride to wear down PERLETTE. PERLETTE, prominent all the way and on the outside, went to the front when ADDIS began tiring and, while holding on willingly, was unable to keep pace when challenged.

Bill Bennings

—At The Post

Hagerstown, Md., July 10.

Dear Al:

Well, we made the jump from Charles Town to Hagerstown, via Suffolk Downs. Clocker Mike came along with me despite the fact that his assets at the moment consisted of 35 cents, a half pack of cigarettes and three Japanese beetles. I had the laugh on him throughout the long West Virginia session. Most of the time he couldn't pick a wad of cotton out of a coal bin. He stabbed a few longshots, but not enough to keep above par. However, he ate regularly, a fact that made the meeting a big success to his way of thinking. Maybe both of us will improve with the change of scenery. Mike always was a half-mile star and his picks will be due respect from now on. Pork Chops is either here or at Charles Town, or between the two places. Ever since the horsemen began transferring their steeds to this track, "Poke" has been riding the vans. I talked to his father the other day and he told me that he was going to give the boy a chance to learn to ride soon. "Poke" has been on the ground since he was tossed on his head by the lead pony at Marlboro last year. However, he has been itching for a chance to show his saddle stuff and Papa Pork is going to let him work out some horses in the morning. "Poke" weighs 61 pounds on the way into the track kitchen. Jockey Sammy Palumbo, riding champion at Charles Town, is ready for a big campaign here. He rode 53 winners at the other town, although his form tailed off somewhat during the last ten days of the meeting. The veteran knows his way around these small ovals and should continue to set the pace. Sammy is a bit secretive about his age, but he is not a youngster. Some Maryland fans will remember that he rode the winner of the seventh race on the day that Sonny Workman won the Preakness at Pimlico with Victorian. And that wasn't yesterday.

BILL.

First race—Trapshoot is a bullet out of the gate. Had a little trouble in that last at Charles Town. Gets a good post here and looks like the winner. Molasses Jane was a winner at the other course and belongs in this company. Nancl's Best to take care of the others.

Second race—Schley Buck did about everything asked at the other track. Seems capable of handling this 117-pound assignment and I'm going to string along. Beaufast fits well in company of this sort and seems certain to be a keen contender. Reigh Tetrarch and Golden Key battle it out for the show.

Third race — Grouchneur was strong on early speed but lacked staying power in those West Virginia races. Meets cheap company in this sprint and may forget to stop. Walli has lots of early lick and is dangerous. Timetta would be a factor if in action but is far down the reserve list.

Fourth race — Adriatic goes a long sprint route in this but is fit as hands make horses. Won five at the other town and the inside post, plus moderate weight, give him the edge. Tuleyries Lin and Schley Goree are good ones for this distance and appear ready to fill out the money bracket.

Fifth race—Scout Rose proved a hard-running horse at the other oval and may be ready to win a race of this sort. Lynconna had some trouble in that last and is dangerous. Clymene is a threat off Charles Town races.

Sixth race—Petee Lad is of the front-running type that go well over the half-milers. May step out at the break and stay on top. Irish Vote closed well in that last and may be returning to form. Cartour for the show end.

Seventh race—Canter Belle may be the right one in the finale. Gets in with 111 pounds and has the speed necessary to take the purse. Ado won two at the other town and is dangerous. Jimmy D. to take care of the others.

Best bet—Schley Buck.

Last Rites Today For Md. Horseman

Frederick, Md., July 10.—Private funeral services will be held tomorrow for Carlos M. De Garmendia, formerly a prominent figure in harness racing and a judge at large on Maryland tracks, who died last night at his estate, Tuscarora Stock Farm. He was 76 years old. Educated at Georgetown University and in Paris and Barcelona, Mr. De Garmendia developed his estate in the southern section of Frederick County and for 30 years bred, trained and raced harness horses.

His most successful horse was Monocacy, a standard-bred bay foaled in 1887, which is considered the greatest trotter ever produced in Maryland. He was appointed a judge of the Maryland Racing Commission and served actively until his health began to fail.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Eva Mae De Garmendia; two sisters, Mrs. Julien T. Davies, Babylon, Long Island; Mrs. John E. Stephens, Dunedin, Fla., and a brother, Cordova De Garmendia, of Baltimore.

Byrd to Take All of U. S. Ice-Breakers

They'll Be at Pole And Too Bad if Potomac Freezes

This country is about to be left entirely without ice ships, it developed yesterday, and if the Potomac freezes stiff while they are gone there won't be a thing to do about it.

Truth is this country has only three ice ships—the North Star, the Northland and the Bear of Oakland—and all of them are going to the Antarctic with Rear Admiral Byrd on the Government's first expedition to that region.

Men to man the three and to carry on scientific work in the polar area are being selected this week by Admiral Byrd and an inter-department committee headed by Dr. Ernest H. Gruening, director of the Division of Territories and Island Possessions.

The Washington heat may be responsible, but there will have to be no conscriptions for the job of staking out America's claims to South Pole territory, officials said. There have been many requests for the assignment, from persons outside the Government as well as within.

Since this is to be a strictly governmental job, volunteers are not being accepted although a few key men are being drawn in for special positions, it was announced.

Red Ruffing And Derringer Start Today

Odds on Americans Drop on Eve of Big Game in New York

L. team, Manager Hartnett will pit five of the league's leading Cincinnati Reds, including the battery of Derringer and Ernie Lombardi.

At the beck of McCarthy and Hartnett will be reserves calculated to gladden the heart of any manager—fellows like Jimmy Foxx, and Buck Newsom and George Case and Lefty Grove and Lefty Gomez on the American League bench, and the likes of Lon Warneke, Bucky Walters, Dolf Camilli, Johnny Mize and Morrie Arnovich in the National League dugout.

The chief surprise evoked by the announced lineups was occasioned by McCarthy's preference for Hank Greenberg over Jimmy Foxx, one of the leagues leading hitters. Greenberg with his modest .286 average, is being outhit by nearly 70 points by Foxx, who is expected to take over the first base role in the late inning.

A minor shock was McCarthy's selection of Tommy Bridges as one of his starting pitchers. The frail Bridges worked a full game on Saturday and for the past two seasons has required five days rest before he is effective. With Lefty Gomez and Lefty Grove tired by pitching assignments in league games yesterday, it was presumed that McCarthy would forego Bridges and name husky Bucky Newsom to one of the pitching jobs.

Unlikely to break into the National League pitching program is Johnny Vander Meer, the sensation of last year's All-Star game. Vander Meer has lost his magic this season and is not regarded as a solid risk.

The American League will be presenting five established home run hitters against the three the National League can offer. Occupying third, fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh places in the A. L. batting order in an unbroken array are Joe DiMaggio, Bill Dickey, Hank Greenberg, Joe Cronin and George Selkirk. Home run threats for the National Leaguers are Ival Goodman, Joe Medwick and Mel Ott.

Precedent in the All-Star battles is with the American Leaguers. It is their "home" game and only twice in the six previous All-Star battles has the home team lost.

Batters will see only right-handed pitching when they go tothe plate. Not a southpaw is slated to get a chance to hurl, and that fact may give the National Leaguers an advantage. In the N. L. batting order are five left-handed hitters—Stanley Hack, Lonnie Frey, Ival Goodman, Mel Ott and Arky Vaughan. Only four American Leaguers—Rogers Cramer, Red Rolfe, Bill Dickey and George Selkirk, bat left-handed.

Behrens Mass At 10 A. M. at Holy Trinity

Georgetown Dramatic Club Chief Directed Sesquicentennial Fete

Requiem mass for Arthur Behrens, 59, late director of the Mask and Bauble Dramatic Club at Georgetown University, will be celebrated at 10 a. m. today at Holy Trinity Church, Georgetown, by the Rev. Ferdinand H. Schoberg, S. J. Father Schoberg was faculty moderator of dramatics at Georgetown when Mr. Behrens first went there in 1937. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

BEHRENS

Mr. Behrens died in Georgetown Hospital Friday after a few days' illness. At the university he directed the sesquicentennial pageant last month and production of John Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln" in the winter of 1937. He also directed the annual play at Gonzaga High School this year, "Oliver Twist." He lived at 1549 Thirty-fifth street northwest.

Born in San Francisco, Calif., Mr. Behrens was a nephew of the famous Shakespearean actor, Robert Mantell, and spent five years acting and directing under his guidance. He was leading man in the first English-speaking theatrical company to tour South America, under management of David Belasco and Cecil B. De Mille.

After two years of acting for silent movies, he became dramatic director at St. Joseph's College, Philadelphia, Pa. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Margaret Behrens, whom he married in 1926, and two children, Wilma, 11, and Arthur, 19 months.

—On Fishing

Readers of this column on several occassions have raised a point of partiality on our part toward certain captains and boatmen, when there were others nearby or at the same place.

ACKERMAN

What they didn't realize is that many boatmen, like anglers, are prone to let their catches grow with the telling of them, and there is no room for such in a medium catering to the public. For that reason we do have a preference for those whom we have found truthful and reliable.

Neither do we appreciate the bellyaching of disgruntled anglers, writing in asking that we publish ill treatment from this or that boatman. Why bring private differences into public view? Instead, just scratch off your list anyone who doesn't appreciate your patronage or is incapable of handling it.

Good Fishing

Or, like three local anglers, who seem to have received a really incompetent boatman, unable to meet an emergency when it arose, report it to the Steamboat inspectors, who can very easily prevent such a negligent boatman from continuing to carry passengers for hire and will do so if he is found to be at fault.

Cobia are striking in no uncertain fashion off Messick on the lower Virginia shore. There are flounders large as doormats, 10 in one catch, and at the same time Capt. George Topping reports the catch of a 7-pound sunfish. We don't know just what the latter might be unless it is a baby of the great ocean sunfish. And last, a few small bluefish are being caught. Roland King reported a small school of blues raising off Cedar Point late last week.

Caught all rigged for bottom fishing, they were down before lures could be trolled through them.

We noted last week the entry of Lois Hechinger in the Flying Fisherman Club of Eastern Air Lines, and her receipt from Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker of the coveted certificate. What we didn't know at the time was that she is but 10 years old.

This morning we have news of another catch that will also bring a certificate, for every other necessary requirement has been met. In addition, when the final analysis for the year is made, there is little doubt that this will be the outstanding catch of "Flying Fishermen" for the year.

608½-Pound Marlin

It was a blue marlin weighing 608½ pounds—exceeded this year only by the new world's record 730-pound fish caught by Mrs. Mary Sears—and was caught by Edward M. Weld of 1619 Nineteenth street northwest. It was taken in 1 hour and 14 minutes, fishing with Capt. Walter Clay on the "Horse Conch," who was also the guide of Mrs. Sears when she took her record fish. Mr. Weld's marlin is the third largest "Gulf Stream blue" ever caught.

Still another catch for the books is a 102½-pound wahoo taken by a commercial fisherman off Miami Beach after a terrific battle, while fishing for Warsaw grouper with a handline on the edge of the Gulf Stream.

As bass waters clear, we hear news of many two and three pounders being taken in the section around Martinsburg, W. Va. This should be good tidings for the increasing numbers of bass fishermen in this area.

The Shenandoah near Charles Town was cloudy on Saturday, but clearing fast. The North Fork in Hampshire County was clear, while the South Fork was clearing fast. The Potomac from Williamsport to Harpers Ferry, although still muddy on Saturday, was also clearing fast. At Swains Lock there were clear streaks as early as Thursday evening. Little Bennett has been clear since the opening of the season.

Eight Teams Selected for Simms Shoot

After declaring a dozen crack shots ineligible to give the others a chance, Treasury officials yesterday selected eight six-man teams from enforcement agencies to compete in the annual marksmanship contest to be held at Camp Simms, Md., during the week of August 7.

The prize is a cup presented by Secretary Morgenthau. The Treasury marksmen are drawn from the Secret Service, Customs Bureau, Alcohol Tax Unit, White House Police, Narcotics Bureau, Bureau of the Mint, and Internal Revenue Bureau.

Heretofore, a dozen or so experts have monopolized the contest. Morgenthau decided this was not good for the morale of the other contestants.

No-Hit Softball Hurlers Oppose

A duel involving no-hit, no-run pitchers is scheduled for Seat Pleasant, Md., tonight when Tru-Blu's ten opposes Golub's Market in second-half Metro Night Softball League competition at 9:15 o'clock.

Irish War Veterans are to meet Dr. Pepper at 8 o'clock.

Abe Rosenfield, Tru-Blu's ace who has pitched three no-hit, no-run contests thus far this season, is to hurl against Jim McBain, Golub's no-hit sensation, in the evening's feature.

Arlington, Engraving Girls Play Tonight

The Arlington Aces and the Bureau of Engraving girls' softball teams will meet in a District-Virginia League doubleheader tonight at Ballston. First game will be called at 8 o'clock.

Then at 9 o'clock Plaza Wine and Liquor's ten will play the Arlington Democrats. The Democrats have reorganized and are said to have a much stronger team.

Riggs National Votes Regular Dividends

$550,000 Transferred From Undivided Profits to Surplus

By Thomas M. Cahill.

After the meeting of the directorate of Riggs National Bank Robert V. Fleming, president, announced the regular dividend on preferred stock of the bank had been declared payable August 1 to stockholders of record at close of business July 10, and that regular dividends on the common stock had been declared payable $2 per share on July 15, to stockholders of record July 10, and $2 per share on October 16 to stockholders of record September 30.

Mr. Fleming stated that the board of directors had also authorized transfer of $550,000 from individual profits to surplus account, thus balancing the surplus with the common capital of the bank. After declaration of the foregoing dividends and transfer of the sum mentioned to surplus, the capital structure of the bank will stand as follows: Preferred capital, $1,100,000; common capital, $3,000,000; surplus, $3,000,000; undivided profits and unallocated reserves, $2,323,500.

The local group will be headed by President Robert V. Fleming, of Riggs National Bank, who is a past president of the national association, as well as a member of its executive council and several important committees.

McLachlen, president of McLachlen Banking Corporation and a past president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association; John A. Reilly, president of Second National Bank and third vice president of the District Bankers Association; Wilmer J. Waller, vice president and cashier of Hamilton National Bank and a member of the A. B. A. executive council and several national bank division committees; Francis G. Addison, jr., president of Security Savings & Commercial Bank and former member of the A. B. Building Loan Volume

A 23-month high in loan volume was the May achievement of savings, building and loan associations reported by the United States Building and Loan League to members of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League. An estimated $89,123,000 was loaned to those wishing to buy, build or repair homes and the portion of it going for new construction was the largest since December; $1 out of every $3.34 advanced.

Dollar volume of construction loans reached $26,646,000, the largest block of building finance which these institutions have undertaken in any one month since before the depression, according to A. D. Theobald, assistant vice president of the National League. Beginnings of construction loan activity by increasing numbers of savings, building and loan associations account largely for the fact that some $9,000,000 more was lent for this purpose in May, 1939, than in May, 1938, he says.

Both loans for home purchase and those for remodeling and repairs totaled more than in any month since June, 1937, and were respectively $7,166,000 and $653,000 greater in volume than in May last year. There was a rise in total loans from April to May of 6.8 per cent and this is the first time in three years that the volume of lending generated by April enthusiasms and the opening of spring building has not fallen off some in May, Mr. Theobald comments. This is taken as an indication that so far as the aver-

Wallace Advises Federal Insurance For Cotton Crops

By the Associated Press

Secretary Wallace told Congress yesterday that it might well extend Federal crop insurance to cotton "in view of the many hazards that affect the production of cotton and the large number of farmers who must face these hazards."

A letter from Wallace to Senator Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, was made public before the House Agriculture Committee by Cecil A. Johnson, assistant manager of the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation.

Johnson appeared in support of a bill by Representative Fulmer (Democrat), South Carolina, to extend to cotton growers the same type of insurance now offered wheat farmers against losses from drought, floods and other natural hazards. Similar legislation has been approved by the Senate Agriculture Committee.

World-Wide Slump Hits Wheat Marts

Chicago Prices Fall To Seven-Year Low For This Time of Year

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 10 (AP).—The price of wheat here plunged more than a cent a bushel today to the lowest level it has been this early in the harvesting season in seven years.

At a low of 65¼, contracts specifying delivery of grain this month were only 2¾ cents above the season's lows established late last year. September wheat, sinking to 66¾, was within a ¾ of the season's bottom while December contracts were at new lows for the year. Corn declined about a cent to the lowest level since 1934.

Liverpool wheat prices tumbled 1⅛ to 1⅝ to quotations ranging between 54⅜ and 58¼, the lowest in eight years, while Winnipeg values, falling about 2 cents at times, reached levels unequaled since 1933.

Break Is General

The break in world wheat values, a continuation of the almost steady decline that has been underway for more than a month, was the result of selling based largely on increasing receipts and market supplies of new U. S. grain, very favorable crop conditions for spring sown wheat, particularly in Canada, and on no more than normal consummer demand.

Buying credited to consumers and shorts accepting profits particularly in the wheat pit brought some rally in all prices before the close but wheat finished ⅞-1¼ lower than Saturday, July 65 ½-⅝, September 66 ⅜-½. Corn was ¼-⅞ lower, July 45 ⅝-¾, September 47-47 ¼; oats unchanged to ¼ down; rye ½-¾ off and lard 15 to 17 lower.

Cotton Futures Climb to Highs For Current Move

New York, July 10 (AP).—Heavy buying carried cotton futures up 10 to 19 points today, putting all active deliveries at new highs on the current forward swing. Brokers said the rise reflected a market effort to adjust itself to a possible 1½ or 2-cent bounty on cotton exported. Most cotton analysts, they added thought these rates likely although so far there has been no definite word from Washington.

Propping the near month, which nevertheless lagged behind distant deliveries, was the continued tight spot situation. Buying represented foreign demand, short covering and trade-price fixing.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, July 10 (AP) (U. S. Dept. Agr.).—A fair volume of business was being transacted today on the Boston wool market. In a few kinds of domestic wools, Mixed blood or three-eighths and quarter blood bright fleece wools offered for delivery from country points, were bringing mostly 30-31 cents in the grease, delivered to users. Graded fine Delaine bright fleece wools were receiving a scattered demand at 28-31 cents in the grease. Good French combing lengths, fine territory wools in original bags were showing a strengthening tendency at prices ranging mostly 65-66 cents, scoured basis.

Stock Prices Edge Higher; Trading at Vanishing Point; Treasury Issues Feature Bonds

New York, July 10.—The stock market gained an average of 0.15 point today, which should bring a few hosannahs and a good rah rah from the financial district, but unfortunately it meant nothing, so the cheers must be saved for a later date. The trouble was that only 282,800 shares changed hands on the big board, which made it the poorest day since July 3 and one of the poorest in recent months and months. At the present pace it is reliably reported the member firms of the stock exchange will be able to pay their office boys, but the landlord will have to listen to a story of hard times.

Stock Exchange's Fine Record

All of which comes under the general heading of persiflage, for when it comes to paying on the line the stock exchange firms have a record which is superlative when contrasted with that of commercial enterprises and even banks. And this applies to hard times as well as to when the harvest moon is shining. Wall Street has fared about as well in recent years as the silk hat industry in Russia but throughout it all it has kept the record of its firms clean. Let him who would hurl the first Irish confetti take a look at the record.

Those who are doing the hurling are numerous but it is particularly discouraging to see a column from Washington which is written by two supposedly intelligent observers take hook, line and sinker some of the anti-Wall Street propaganda which apparently was fed out by some SEC underlying. Wall Street has become well-accustomed to taking it, but when obvious misstatements are fed out over the country by two newspapermen who know better, the natural conclusion is that they have permitted themselves to be used.

Washingin Misinformation

It was hot in Washington and news was dull over the week-end. This may explain why readers of some 200 newspapers were fed a diet of misinformation. According to the column in question, which is a sounding board for those New Dealers who prefer not to speak out loud, the meeting this Friday between Mr. William McC. Martin, president of the Stock Exchange, and the SEC is something that will affect the pocketsbooks of every American investor; it will consider protection against future Richard Whitneys; and, following the Whitney scandal, Justice William Douglas called on the Stock Exchange to take immediate steps to protect broker customers from theft and mismanagement—but Wall street did nothing. There was more but this was the carrion of the article.

On the face of it the whole accusation is false. From Timbuctoo to Kalamazoo there are laws against theft, but possibly they didn't realize this in Washington. Now as for the charge that the Stock Exchange not doing anything about it, all that happened was that the Stock Exchange underwent one of the most far-reaching reorganizations that ever happened to any institution. It was a reorganization outlined by an independent group and it was adopted almost unanimously by the exchange itself and instituted with the plaudits of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

New Safeguards

Not stopping there, the exchange subsequently adopted a 15-point program, all of which were designed to provide additional safeguards for the public in its dealings with member firms. The greater part of that program already has been put into effect. One of the features not yet put into effece is that having to do with a so-called central depository. With respect to this, the exchange engaged a well-known firm of public accountants to make an exhaustive survey and the results of that survey, which were recently made public, have indicated the impracticability of such a depository until the exchange business reaches a daily average of approximately 2,000,000 shares.

Chairman Jerome N. Frank of the SEC recently, in an address in New York, expressed his own misgivings as to the adequacy of such an institution. In the same address he proposed for serious consideration by the exchange the idea of brokers' banks. It is this subject of a brokers' bank which is to be taken up at the Friday conference between Mr. Frank and Mr. Martin. This is the factual record, which must have escaped the attention of certain Washington commentators, the source of whose information can only be guessed.

It is pretty near time to call a halt on this anti-Wall Street propaganda. It went all right in the Corn Belt when the banks were closed, but now that we are all enjoying the more abundant life most everyone has come to the conclusion that 1929 is a long way back and Warr Street wasn't the fault in the first place. There are more real problems facing us now, such as reviving business and keeping peace in the world, and to dust off the old bogey of wicked money changers in the temple hints of a willingness to be used rather than to deal with live subjects less than a decade old.

Government Bonds Gain

Small gains were registered in the listed bond market today, but trading only amounted to $4,350,000, indicating that little real interest was taken in senior securities. United States Treasury issues continued to rally, and best grade corporate bonds were in demand. Speculative issues showed more small gains than losses, and foreign dollar bonds were neglected.

Long term United States Government bonds showed advances ranging to ⅝ point, but the intermediated dated issues hardly moved. The tendency results partly from the fear of dealers that "rights" values are to be cut by the Treasury on successive new financing items. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations made some progress on the upside, but there was little business. Dealers accumulated whatever offerings appeared of the best grade utility, railroad and industrial bonds, but business was slack.

Railroad Bonds

Medium priced carrier bonds were stimulated slightly by indications of legislative progress in Washington, in aid of the rails. Default bonds were less affected by this consideration. Among the local transactions, Interborough bonds did well, but Manhattan Elevated and B. M. T. issues were uncertain. Holding company bonds were idle, and convertible issues remained in previous ranges. Other special groups developed nothing new.

Highest grade foreign dollar bonds were in quiet demand, Irish Free State 5s being prominent. Polish obligations were firm, despite the war of propaganda regarding Danzig. German, Italian and Japanese bonds drifted lower. Latin-American default bonds tended to improve, but the changes were small.

Copper Sales Largest Since October, 1936

New York, July 10 (AP).—Heavy buying of domestic refined copper boosted Friday's sales to 85,709 tons, the best day for the industry since October 26, 1936, figures released today indicated. Highest daily tonnage ever disposed in any market was 106,101 tons on July 21, 1936, veteran copper men said. The sharply increased business was done at the newly established level of 10¼ cents a pound.

Since the current buying wave started on June 30, total sales have reached 164,166 tons. Trade interests remembered that this time last year a similar cycle of buying lifted sales to around 154,500 tons.

Railroad Group To Ask for Bids On Bond Issue

Morgan Stanley and Kuhn, Loeb Say They Will Withdraw

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, July 10.—Directors of the Terminal Railroad Association of St. Louis voted unanimously today to dispose of a $7,000,000 refinancing bond issue through competitive bidding rather than at a private sale.

The action followed a demand by Robert R. Young, president of Allegheny Corporation, that the competitive method be followed, and an announcement by Morgan Stanley & Co., New York investment underwriting firm, that it and Kuhn, Loeb & Co. would withdraw from the negotiations if a competitive sale were decided upon.

Arrangements for the sale of the bonds will be handled by a special committee headed by P. J. Watson, jr., president of the Terminal Association. The sale will be before October 1; the date of maturity of the bonds which are to be replaced by the new issue.

The bonds which are maturing bear 4½ per cent interest. The new issue will bear interest of not more than 3½ per cent, and will mature July 1, 1974.

Young wrote directors of the association that unless competitive bids were received, and unless "an exceptionally favorable bid from independent bankers of the highest standing" were considered, the directors would be held "personally accountable." The Alleghany is the holding firm for stock of the Missouri Pacific and some other railroads sharing in control of the terminal.

Morgan Stanley & Co. expressed the belief that competitive sales of new issues of corporate securities "do not operate in the best interest of the borrower or the investor," and that they tend to over-price the issue to the investor.

Steel Shipments Increase in June

New York, July 10 (AP).—Shipments of finished steel products by U. S. Steel Corporation subsidiaries in June totaled 733,438 tons, an increase of 10,268 tons over May and 256,376 more than June last year.

Total shipments for the first half of the year amounted to 4,393,266 tons, compared with 3,010,354 in the first half of 1938.

Failures Decline

New York, July 10 (AP).—Business failures in the United States during the five-day week ended July 6 dropped to 162, due largely to the Fourth-of-July holiday, Dun & Bredstreet reported today. This compares with 233 in the preceding week and 193 a year ago, also a holiday week.

IT simply is not sensible to be entirely uninformed about funeral costs. Allot ten minutes this week to an Ethical Funeral Director for a brief discussion of this important matter.

You will be glad you did when a death occurs and you are obliged, in spite of great emotional confusion, to make decisions quickly.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

The Adjutant General's Office Lodge No. 2, American Federation of Government Employes, will send half a dozen delegates to the AFGE's conclave at Atlantic City in September. It is expected that after this year the convention will run on a biennial instead of yearly schedule.

Slated to go from the AGO are G. Carroll Dimond, Samuel C. Sacco, Harry J. Keller, Patrick J. Fitzgibbons, Mary Glancy Bragg and John E. Lyle. Refreshing your memory: Favorite bills of the AFGE and its president, Charles I. Stengle, who has headed the group since 1936, are S. 8281 on retirement—H.R. 980, extension of the merit system and classification act to the field service—H.R. 892, annual step-up in salaries for custodian employes in post offices all over the country.

The Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation carries a big market basket. During the fiscal year just closed, it purchased 1,700,000,000 pounds of surplus agricultural commodities, for which it paid $86,000,000, this round, fat sum included freight and handling charges. Not all the poundage was foodstuffs. Cotton and cotton ticking took up 15,500,000 pounds of the total weight.

Birmingham, Ala., is the fourth city to join the food stamp plan. This carries out what this column said several days ago when it prophesied that the next stamp city would be located in the corn belt or in the South. Figured from the 1933 census, Birmingham has a population of 259,000. Out of this number, there wil be about 52,000 eligible to pass stamps for food. Families will receive free a set of blue stickers on the basis of 50 cents worth of stamps per week for each member of the family.

According to Dudley Bayliss, of the planning division of National Parks, 60 miles of new good roads will be added to the North Carolina-Blue Ridge Parkway in the next couple of weeks. Your car will be able to jog along without any strain on its springs from a point south of the Virginia-North Carolina line to Deep Gap, in the next 14 days. Just behind Bayliss' desk is a 6-foot map of the park. Typewritten pieces of paper stuck here and there indicate the Forest Service's recommendations for recreation cabins.

National Parks may look rustic but behind the scenery there is plenty of landscape gardening that doesn't meet the eye. For instance, big trees are transplanted to places where they will hide road scars and other clumps of trees are chopped down to make the view the kind you can snap with your camera. Whole areas of "natural growth" are moved, root and shrub down next to the road in order to bring Mother Nature as close as possible to the passing motorist. And if there is any grass planting to be done, the only kind of grass that is used must be typical of the area in which the park is situated.

Then, suppose there's a field of grain that looks kind of pretty just as you round a turn. The State purchases the field from the farmer; and the land is deeded to the United States. Mr. Farmer may lease it back again.

With formal dedication day still unselected, (Secretary Harry L. Hopkins may be chief speaker), the full dinner pail at Camp Hi-Catoctin way up in those mountains near Thurmont, Md., still is bringing out Federal employes, and their families by the droves. According to Mildred S. Kerr, who writes for the Camp Council, there's only room for 72 families at once and the Independence Day turn-away was record-breaking.

Assistant director, Marie Neitzel, of Wisconsin—swimming, archery, badminton, horseshoes, volleyball, baseball, assistant director, Warren Chaney, of California—arts and crafts, including photography, metal work, leather work, ceramics, outdoor sketching; Leslie S. Clark, of New Hampshire—nature program, hikes.

Finally, if you're interested in dramatics, music, folk and social dancing you have a quartet of counselors to choose from composed of Althea Chaney, of California; Virginia Bowden, of Wisconsin, Jane Shuttleworth, of Ohio, and Emily Sarola from our town.

Old Faithful at Yellowstone Park is just a stripling. For decades it got away with an age of 10,000 years. Then Dr. C. Max Bauer, park naturalist, started looking up Old Faithful's past, and discovered that 9,800 years will have to be knocked off the geyser's record. It seems the park's biggest attraction was just a hot pool a little over 200 years ago. As an active spouter it only started being headline news about that time. It's doing pretty nicely now however. Old Faithful puts on its show every 66 minutes and there are 10,000 to 12,000 gallons of water in its 150 foot column.

It's still something to tell the folks back home about, even if Dr. Bauer did make it be its age.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

C. W. asks whether a takeout double is forcing or not upon the partner when there is no intervening bid.

Here are the cards in the particular case:

North
♠ 6 4 3 2
♡ 9 6 3
◇ 9 4 2
♣ 8 5 4
South
♠ Q J
♡ A K J 7
◇ A K 8
♣ A K 7 3

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	Dbl.	Pass	?

"Is South's bid forcing, and if so what should North bid on his absolute bust?" asks C. W. "One spade was made," he concludes.

South is correct in maintaining that his double is forcing. The only time that the takeout double can be passed (when there is no intervening bid) is when the partner believes a profit can be made by letting the double stand and winning a penalty from the opponents.

There is no justification to the argument that with a weak hand a player should pass. The weaker the doubler partner's hand, the more necessary it is that he should bid.

When his only four-card suit is the adversaries' and he has no stoppers in it to warrant a no-trump bid, he should name his lowest three-card minor, which in this case is clubs. When North bids two clubs, South knows his partner's hand is worthless and whatever initiative is taken thereafter is up to him.

The oldest forcing bid of contract is the opening bid of two in a suit. The most heinous crime in contract is to pass this bid if made by partner, but in spite of its age and the veneration in which it is held, players are still passing it today.

NUTS AND JOLTS

PULITZER PRIZE NOVEL

THE YEARLING

By Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings

CHAPTER XXXV

She reached the seepage pool at the bottom and began to fish in earnest. Her long, black fingers groped under fallen twigs and branches. She lay on her side to reach into a crevice for, no doubt, a crayfish. A frog jumped, and she made a quick circular pounce and waded back to the edge with it. She sat up on her hind legs and held it a moment, kicking, against her breast, then sunk her teeth in it and shook it, as a dog shakes a rat. She dropped it between her off-spring. They pounced on it and snarled and growled and cracked its bones and finally shared it. She watched dispassionately a moment, then turned back into the pool. Her bushy tail was lifted just above the water level. The young ones waded out after her. Their peaked noses lifted above the water. She turned and saw them and dragged them back to land. She lifted each one in turn and spanked its small furry bottom in so human a way that Jody had to clap his hand over his mouth to keep from shouting. He watched her for a long time, fishing and feeding them. Then she ambled leisurely across the floor of the sink-hole and up the far slope and away over the rim, the young ones following, chirring and grumbling amiably together.

M. K. Rawlings

THE SINK-HOLE lay all in shadow. Suddenly it seemed to Jody that Fodder-wing had only now gone away with the raccoons. Something of him would always be near them. Fodder-wing was like the trees. He was of the earth, as they were earthy, with his gnarled, frail roots deep in the sand. He was like the changing clouds and the setting sun and the rising moon. A part of him had been always outside his twisted body. It had come and gone like the wind. It came to Jody that he need not be lonely for his friend again. He could endure his going.

He went to the drinking trough and filled the buckets with as much water as he could carry, and went home. He told at table of the 'coons, and even his mother was interested to hear about the spanking, and no one questioned his delay. After supper, he sat with his father and listened to the hoot-owls and the frogs, and a far wild-cat and still farther foxes, and to the north, a wolf that howled and was answered. He tried to tell his father the thing that he had felt that day. Penny listened gravely, and nodded, but Jody could not quite make his father understand.

The first week in September was as parched and dry as old bones. Only the weeds grew. There was a tension in the heat. The dogs were snappish. The snakes were crawling, dog days being past, and their shedding and their blindness ended. Penny killed a rattler under the grape arbor that measured seven feet in length. He had seen the coffee-weed shaking as though an alligator were passing through and had followed. The rattler, he said, was after the quail, to fill his long belly on his way to his winter quarters. He dried the great hide on the smokehouse wall and then hung it on the front room wall beside the fireplace.

He said, "I like to look at it. I know there's one o' the boogers'll not harm nobody.

THE HEAT WAS THE WORST of the whole summer, yet there was a vague change, as though the vegetation sensed the passing of one season and the coming of another. The golden-rod and asters and the deer-tongue thrived on the dryness. The pokeberries ripened and the birds fed on them along the fence-rows. All the creatures, Penny said, were hard put to it for food. The spring and summer berries, the brierberries, the huckleberries, the blueberries and chokeberries and the wild gooseberries, were long since gone. The wild plum and the mayhaw had had no fruit for bird or beast for many a month. The 'coons and foxes had stripped the wild grape vines.

The fall fruits were not yet ripe, papaw and gallberry and persimmon. The mast of the pines, the acorns of the oaks, the berries of the palmetto, would not be ready until the first frost. The deer were feeding on the tender growth, bud of sweet bay and myrtle, sprigs of wire-grass, tips of arrow root in the ponds and prairies, and succulent lily stems and pads. The type of food kept them in the low, wet places, the swamps, the prairies and the bay-heads. They seldom crossed Baxter's Island. They were hard to hunt in the boggy places. In a month, Penny was able only to bring down one yearling buck. Its spike horns were still in the velvet. They felt like a coarse rough wool. Shreds hung, where the yearling had rubbed them against saplings, to ease the itch of growth and hurry their hardening. Ma Baxter ate them boiled, saying they tasted like marrow. Penny and Jody had no taste for them. They could see too plainly the big eyes under the new horns.

The bears, too, were in the low places. They were feeding for the most on palmetto buds, ripping out the hearts ruthlessly. The palm hammock around Sweetwater Spring looked as though a hurricane had swept through it. The low-growing palmettos were slashed into ribbons, the sweet cream-colored cores eaten below the level of the ground. Even some of the tall palms looked as though struck by lightning, where a less lazy bear or a hungrier one had scaled the trunk and torn out the bud. The palmettos, Penny said, would die. They were like all living things. They could not live with the heart gone. One low palm had been only shredded from the outside. The heart was intact. Penny cut out the smooth cylinder with his hunting knife to carry home to cook. The Baxters liked swamp cabbage as well as the bears.

"But when them scapers runs short o' palmeeters," Penny said, "hit's look out for the shoats. You kin look to see the bears climbin' into the lot most ary night now. And your friend Fag here, you best keep him with you faithful, especial at night. I'll stand up to your Ma, do she quarrel about it."

"Ain't Flag gittin' too big for a bear to bother?"

"A bear'll kill ary creetur can't out-run him. Why, on the prairie one year, a bear killed my bull, was nigh as big as he was. Hit made him a meal for a week. He come back to it 'til there wasn't nothin' left o' the bull but the beller, and that was gone, too."

MA BAXTER'S COMPLAINT was at lack of rain. Her rain barrels were empty. All her washing must be done at the sink-hole. The clothes were looking dingy.

She said, "Clothes washes easier, anyways, on a cloudy day. My Ma allus said, 'Soft weather, soft clothes.'"

She needed rain-water, too, to clabber the milk. The milk turned rankly sour in the heat but would not clabber. In hot weather, she always depended on a few drops of rain-water to clabber it, and at every shower would send Jody to a hickory tree to catch some, for rain-water dripped from a hickory was best for the purpose.

The Baxters watched the quartering of the September moon anxiously. Penny called his wife and son when the first quarter appeared. The silver crescent was almost perpendicular. He was jubilant.

"We'll git rain soon, shore," he told them. "If the moon was straight acrost, hit'd push the water out and we'd not git none. But look at it. Hit'll rain to where you kin hang your clothes right on the line and the Lord'll wash 'em."

He was a good prophet. Three days later every sign was of rain. Passing by Juniper Springs from a hunt, he and Jody heard the alligators bellowing. Bats flew in the daytime. Frogs caah-caah-caahed steadily at night. The Dominick rooster crowed in the middle of the day. The jay-birds bunched and flew back and forth together, screaming as one. Ground rattlers crawled across the clearing in the hot sunny afternoon. On the fourth day a flock of white sea-birds flew over. Penny shaded his eyes against the sun and watched after them uneasily.

He said to Jody, "Now them ocean jessies don't belong to be crossin' Floridy. I don't like it. Hit means bad weather, and when I say bad, I mean bad."

Jody felt a lift of spirit like the sea-birds. He loved storm. It swept in magnificently and shut the family inside in a great coziness. Work was impossible and they sat about together and the rain drummed on the hand-hewn shingles. His mother was good-natured and made him syrup candy, and Penny told tales.

He said, "I hope it's a pure hurricane."

"Don't you wish sich as that. A hurricane flattens the crops and drowns the pore sailors and takes the oranges offen the trees. And down south, why, boy, hit tears down houses and cold-out kills people."

Jody said meekly, "I won't wish it agin. But wind and rain is fine."

"All right. Wind and rain. That's another thing."

THE SUN SET strangely that night. The sunset was not red, but green. After the sun was gone, the west turned gray. The east filled with a light the color of young corn. Penny shook his head.

"I don't like it. Hit looks mighty boogerish."

In the night, a gust of wind moved through and slammed both doors. The fawn came to Jody's bed and poked its muzzle against his face. He took it up on the bed with him. The morning, however, was clear, but the east was the color of blood. Penny spent the morning repairing the roof of the smokehouse. He brought drinking water twice from the sink-hole, filling all available buckets. In the late morning, the sky turned gray and remained so. There was no air stirring.

"I don't think. But somethin's comin', ain't natural."

In midafternoon the skies turned so black that the chickens went to roost. Jody drove in Trixie and the calf and Penny milked early. He turned old Caesar into the lot and put a forkful of the last remaining hay in his manger.

Penny said, "Git the eggs outen the nests. I'm goin' to the house. Hurry now, else you'll git ketched."

The hens were not laying and there were only three eggs in the lot nests. Jody climbed into the corn-crib where the old Barred Rock was laying. The left-over husks rustled under his feet. The dry, sweet-scented air was close and thick. He felt stifled. There were two eggs in the nest and he put all five inside his shirt and started for the house. He had not felt the hurry that had infected his father. Suddenly, in the false twilight stillness, he took alarm. A great roaring sounded in the distance. All the bears in the scrub, meeting at the river, might make such a roaring. It was wind.
